U. S. May Sell Crop Surplus To the Poor At Cut Rates

Study 2-Price Plan Wallace Favors It To Replace Subsidies 'Domestic Dumping'

By Robert C. Albright.

A Government-subsidized "two-price system" for domestic consumers, providing farm commodities to low-income groups at below-market levels, is being seriously considered by Administration farm economists.

Disclosing rough outlines of the plan, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said "we have hold of something here that's worth going into."

Domestic "Dumping"

"If there is to be a two-price system and if there is to be dumping, I would much rather see American consumers the beneficiaries rather than foreign consumers," he said.

The plan would utilize largely the Federal surplus commodity setup, which has purchased everything from milk, cheese and butter to cabbages and tomatoes, taking them off the surplus market, and supplying them gratis to relief families.

Apparently ordinary consumers would pay the regular market price, low income consumers would pay the lower price made possible by wholesale subsidy operations, and many on relief would continue to receive FSCC surplus food handouts.

Asked if the proposal was to extend food subsidy benefits to all low-income consumers, Wallace replied only: "This Administration is very much interested in the lower one-third of the population."

Previously it was known that the Administration was studying the possibility of paying subsidies to cotton manufacturers who would agree to turn out goods at reduced prices to relief and low-income families. This study has the dual objective of increased use of the huge cotton surplus backlog, and relief for low-income groups.

Scope Broadened

The broader plan, Wallace said, could apply to any type of commodity for which there is an "elastic" demand. He said that would not include wheat, but could include cotton, and most commodities now handled by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

Under the Agriculture Department's new streamlined reorganization, the FSCC is given a bureau status under Assistant AAA Chief J. W. Tapp, who is administering the AAA marketing agreements program. Understood to be interested in the study is A. G. Black, former head of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, who has been put in charge of marketing and regulatory work.

Wallace indicated the plan could be financed by customs receipts now available to the FSCC, but he indicated the study has not advanced to the point of determining whether subsidized products would be distributed through regular market channels or Government-supervised stores.

Doubts Value of Subsidies

The Government already has embarked on a subsidized wheat export program contemplating movement of 100,000,000 bushels of the wheat surplus abroad on a two-price basis, but Wallace has opposed extension of the two-price program to other commodities. He said he largely agreed with Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre's statement that surpluses cannot be forced on foreign countries by strong-arm methods, but wheat presented "a very special situation."

Wallace was evidently referring to some pressure for extension of this program when he said if there is any "dumping" of products he thought it should be "done at home" to assist low-income consumers in this country.

He repeated his belief that the only permanent solution of the world wheat surplus problem should come through an international ever-normal granary program.

Auto Workers Settle Sit-Down

Detroit, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Workers evacuated the Motor Products Plant here tonight, ending a sit-down strike that broke out this morning when employes quit work and barricaded the factory.

A day-long conference between the United Automobile Workers and the management resulted in a temporary settlement late today. The 2,000 men in the plant accepted the terms.

Garment Union Asks Roosevelt Act on Labor

Urges Truce Talks Sees Room for All New Deal Upheld

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 12.—The International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, through its official organ, Justice, tonight urged that President Roosevelt "call at once into conference the leadership of both C. I. O. and A. F. of L. to explore once more, in a mood of sincere reciprocity, the possibilities of reconciliation."

If mediation becomes necessary after such a meeting, the magazine suggested it could best be achieved "either by a public-spirited committee agreed upon by both sides or through a committee of mediators chosen directly by the President."

The magazine said it would be "little short of absurd to accept the proposition that the resignations of Lewis and Green would automatically bring peace between C. I. O. and A. F. of L."

"We refuse to accept the thought," Justice said, "that the overemphasized antipathy of these two men toward one another contains the core of the division between the two great contending factions of the labor movement.

"We refuse to subscribe to the idea that there is no room for both Green and Lewis at the very top of American Labor leadership. We reject the suggestion that peace in the American labor army can be

Warring Brothers Will Be Tried November 15

The three Warring brothers and their income tax experts will be tried in District court November 15 for conspiracy to defraud the Government of its share of the profits of the Warring numbers racket. Charles, 30; Emmitt, 32, and Leo Warring, 43, and Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax counselor, pleaded not guilty yesterday before Justice Laws. Henry L. Sherr, the fifth defendant, will be arraigned today.

Justice Laws set $5,000 bond for Charles Warring, who has been serving a term in Atlanta penitentiary for complicity in the shooting of George O'Brien.

Interstate Clerks Ruled Under Pay Bill

Andrews Gives Edict Wages to Be Fixed Effective October 24

The pay and hours of stenographers, clerks, messengers, watchmen and maintenance employes in interstate commerce industries are subject to provisions of the wage-hour act, Administrator Elmer F. Andrews ruled yesterday.

Workers in these categories, Andrews held in his first interpretative ruling, are engaged in capacities "necessary to production" of goods and therefore come under the law which provides for a minimum 25-cent hourly wage the first year and a work week of 44 hours, above which time and one-half must be paid.

Pointing out that the law, which becomes effective October 24, does not apply only to those working on an hourly wage, he added:

"This does not mean that employes cannot be paid on a piece work basis after October 24. It merely means that whatever the basis on which the workers are paid, whether it be monthly, weekly, or on a piece work basis, they must receive at least the equivalent of the minimum hourly rate."

The ruling, prepared by Calvert Magruder, Andrews' general counsel, holds that the act makes no prescription where employes must work, and hence "they are entitled to its benefits whether they perform their work at home, in the factory, or elsewhere."

It is said that Andrews, as administrator, "should properly lean towards a broad interpretation of the key words, 'engaged in commerce or in the production of goods,'" in making his determination of workers coming within the scope of the act.

Andrews pointed out that the act covers employes "engaged in (interstate) commerce" industries, such as telephone, telegraph, radio and transportation concerns, and workers engaged in "production of goods" for interstate commerce distribution such as manufacturing, processing or distributing plants, if the goods move out of the State.

"Since these industries serve as the actual instrumentality and channels of interstate commerce, employes who are an essential part of

Gary, FCC Counsel, Defies Chairman's Demand He Resign

By James D. Secrest.

Culminating what employes of the Federal Communications Commission have labeled a "purge," Chairman Frank R. McNinch yesterday asked for the resignation of Hampson Gary, FCC general counsel and former diplomat, and threatened that he "has the votes" to oust him.

A hurried meeting of the commission was called for yesterday afternoon and then postponed until tomorrow as two members of the commission indicated they would stand by the general counsel, who told the chairman he would not quit his post voluntarily.

McNinch's abrupt move caught his colleagues on the commission by surprise and threatened to bring to a climax an intracommission row that has been gaining in fury for several months.

Gary was the center of the maelstrom yesterday, but some members of the commission were certain that McNinch had on his "purge" list the following:

T. J. Slowie, commission secretary, who is reported to have had the indorsement of James Roosevelt, son of the President, when he was appointed.

Davis G. Arnold, chief examiner, a Civil Service employe for 17 years.

G. Franklin Wisner, chief of the information service, a Civil Service employe for 12 years.

Many of the legal staff, running to a total of 70, whose ability and work are under scrutiny.

The diminutive FCC chairman had just returned from the Naval Hospital, where he has been undergoing treatment for a stomach ailment intermittently since midsummer. Coincident with his return the Civil Service Commission had refused his request for exemption of some 60 jobs from the merit system, a move which FCC employes heralded as the beginning of the "purge."

The request for Gary's resignation came as a surprise although it was known that the two officials were not in complete harmony. McNinch, who left the Federal Power Commission a year ago to head the

Women Deny Stealing Men's Jobs

Reply to Idle Census They Need the Work 'Hardships' Feared Protest to Roosevelt

By William V. Nessly.

Women resentfully denied yesterday that they are competing with men for jobs and said they were at work only because the men were no longer able to be their breadwinners.

The indignant outburst quickly followed publication of figures obtained in the unemployment census conducted last year under direction of John D. Biggers, and both Biggers and President Roosevelt were told yesterday of the women's strong feelings on the matter.

Biggers last week submitted his resignation to the President, along with the final report on his stupendous count of the Nation's out-of-work. He called attention to figures revealing an unexpectedly large number of women earning their own livelihood, while men were seeking employment. From the figures there came the conclusion on the part of some commentators that women in the labor market were the crux of the unemployment problem.

Fears "Hardships"

Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., was quick to take issue yesterday with such an interpretation. In a letter to President Roosevelt and Biggers, she asked for a complete copy of the census report and said:

"Headlines which indicate that you find 'women cause a glut in labor' give an emphasis to your findings which will undoubtedly cause hardships on the millions of women who work to support themselves and those dependent upon them."

Continuing, she wrote:

"The implication placed upon your report is that women are to blame for the unemployment which exists among men by competing with them in labor, rather than the opposite and true picture, which is that the depression has forced millions of women to work because men were no longer able to be the breadwinners.

"As you know, statistics are cold and unfeeling. Their value lies in the interpretation placed upon them."

Points to Study

Miss White said her federation last year made a study of a cross-section of some 12,000 members to find out "Why Women Work." She sent the President and the special

Death Toll at 20, Northwest Forest Fires Rage Anew

By the Associated Press.

Fires which had been temporarily in check after taking 20 lives in Monday's widespread conflagration, were spreading rapidly late last night in the International Falls (Minn.) and Fort Frances (Ontario) areas.

Fire fighting forces along the international border redoubled their efforts as rising winds spread the flames.

Ontario provincial police were endeavoring to evacuate residents of the danger zone.

It was feared the death toll would grow. Two families were missing northwest of Fort Frances, and ten persons were in a serious condition in Fort Frances Hospital. It was not known how many persons were included in the two families.

Lovesick Girl Kept From Death Leap

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 12 (AP).—Sixteen-year-old Noime Sanchez stood today on the edge of a 150-foot cliff and threatened to jump to her death, while several hundred persons pleaded with her to return to a safe position.

The girl told police she had quarreled with her lover.

PWA Gives Hyde Park $585,000 for Schools

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Hyde Park, President Roosevelt's home town, received its first PWA grant today after 5½ years of the New Deal. Arthur F. J. White, superintendent of Hyde Park schools, said the grant was a $585,000 donation toward a $1,300,000 program to build three schools.

Japanese Plan Possession of South China

No Feint, Says Army Canton Railway Cut Fight 80 Miles From City

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 13.—The Japanese invasion of South China was seen today as no mere feint but the start of operations to dominate South China and facilitate the present full-power offensive against Hankow.

The landing of Japanese forces yesterday at Bias Bay, northeast of British Hongkong, was regarded as a drive to sever railways about Canton and a start toward occupation of that metropolis and the surrounding rich coastal areas.

This was the unofficial but virtually unanimous opinion of Japanese army and navy circles in Shanghai.

They expressed belief Japan was prepared, capable and determined to throw into South China whatever armed force needed. Trained foreign observers believed such a force would have to be comparable to that operating against Hankow, which has been estimated at 300,000 men.

The Japanese army spokesman declared the South China invasion was destined to shorten the war and hasten Hankow's downfall. The

Trunks Approved As Navy Uniform For Sunbathing

Whoopee, girls, the Navy's going suntanned!

Though the Navy solemnly points out that neither underwear nor the epidermis is at present an "authorized outer Navy uniform," all that's going to be changed. Now the gobs can take sunbaths on the decks of fighting ships and expose their tattooing in the vitamins. The required uniform will be trunks.

It all came about because the Navy has at last recognized the "existing inclination of mankind toward nakedness and idleness." So a ruling, drafted by Rear Admiral G. J. Rowcliff, commander of cruisers, Scouting Force, was issued.

"It seems only fair," he ruled, "to observe that, the sun's age and man's antiquity being what they are, sun bathing has been practiced for some time in the past without a policy . . . However the use of trunks has been established as suitable for public swimming from ships of the Navy, for raceboat crews and for other athletic exercises on board. There appears to be no reason why they may not be used for sunbathing, if desired."

Mrs. Roosevelt Need Not Curtsey

London, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt must decide for herself whether she will curtsey to Queen Elizabeth if the British King and Queen visit the United States, an authority on court etiquette said tonight.

It was explained that to British royalty the status of Mrs. Roosevelt, as wife of the President, would be that of "consort of the head of the country," while that of Queen Elizabeth would be "distinguished visitor."

The President and his wife, and all who meet the King and Queen woud address them first as "your majesty," and thereafter as "sir" or "madam."

Asks Civic Teaching Envoy Reads Message Jubilee Celebrated Hierarchy Responds

By Edward T. Folliard

Pope Pius XI, in a special letter that indirectly assailed the European dictatorships for their trampling of human rights, yesterday asked the American hierarchy to see that the Catholic educational system in this country gives special attention to civics, sociology and economics, and that it teach these subjects from the standpoint of Christian truth.

Acting with unprecedented speed, the hierarchy—cardinals, archbishops and bishops—immediately resolved to dedicate the machinery of their school system to the inculcation of democratic ideals, interpreted according to Catholic teaching. Their action was made known to the Pontiff in a cablegram to Rome phrased in Latin.

The Catholic school system in the United States embraces more than 10,000 elementary and higher schools, colleges and universities, with a registration of between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000.

The letter of Pope Pius was read to a colorful throng of 3,000 gathered at Catholic University for the formal opening of the university's golden jubilee celebration. It was read by the Most Rev. Amleto C. Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States.

The Pope, whose reign has seen the rise of the Communists in Russia, the Fascists in Italy and the Nazis in Germany, spoke of the attacks that were being made on Christian doctrine and Christian morality in several quarters.

He denounced the civic philosophies that would "degrade man to the position of a soulless pawn in the sordid game of power and prestige" or that would "set him at the throat of his fellows in a blind, brutish class struggle for existence."

He said that the sciences of civics, sociology and economics cannot ignore God, and added:

"Christian teaching alone, in its majestic integrity, can give full meaning and compelling motive to the demand for human rights and liberties because it alone gives worth to human personality."

Slovaks Reject Land Demands Of Hungary

Propose Autonomy Plea to Hitler Reported Troops Are Impatient

By the Associated Press.

Komarom (On the Czechoslovak-Hungarian Border), Oct. 12.—Czechoslovak negotiators today rejected Hungarian claims for the predominantly Hungarian population in certain parts of Czechoslovakia.

It was authoritatively reported that Hungary would walk out of the conference tomorrow unless her demands were met, though the negotiators were scheduled to meet at 9 a. m. (3 a. m. Eastern standard time) tomorrow to resume the negotiations.

With the talks in deadlock, the Slovak delegation, sources close to that delegation said, had decided to ask the mediation of Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany.

Troops on both sides of the frontier appeared to be impatient.

The Slovaks, who in three days of conferences offered a variety of proposals, were understood to have suggested even that autonomy be provided for the heavily populated Hungarian areas in Slovakia, itself

Posses Scour Canebrakes for Attack-Killer

Ruston, La., Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Posses tonight combed dense woods and canebrakes in search of a burly colored man accused of ravishing two girls, clubbing to death the escort of one and seriously beating the other's companion.

The searchers numbered more than 1,000. State and parish officers directing the manhunt took precautions against mob violence.

Bob Blair, 45-year-old paper mill foreman, of Hodge, was fatally beaten last night and his 20-year-old girl companion was dragged from the automobile and attacked in a nearby brush clump.

Officers believed the man was the same who beat J. W. Breedlove, 20, last September 13, then attacked his co-ed companion.

D. C. 'Death Banner' to Record Each Fatal Traffic Accident

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Washington is going to have two flags—symbols of life and death on the city's traffic-clogged streets.

One will be white—a public signal of success in the battle to wipe out accident fatalities.

The other, a black banner with skull and cross-bones, will symbolize death—a public announcement that another life has been needlessly sacrificed to carelessness.

From atop a pole in front of the District Building, the banners will fly, beginning October 18, as part of The Washington Post's traffic safety program.

The white flag will remain up on every death-free day. When the District records an accident fatality, the symbol of safety will be lowered and in its place will fly the banner of death.

The skull and cross-bones of tragedy will remain aloft for 24 hours, reminding Washington residents one of their neighbors—or possibly a friend or relative—has been killed.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, whose department erected the "life and death" pole, announced it would be at The Post's disposal indefinitely.

Raising of the safety symbol on October 18 will signalize a new attempt to keep District streets free from death.

The city of Providence, R. I., was successful with a similar program. For 125 days in succession, the white banner remained atop a pole erected in the center of the downtown business district.

So, to Washington motorists and pedestrians, The Post urges:

Arabs Slay Loyal Chiefs And Retake Bethlehem

British Driven Back Hold Parts of City Clashes Kill 25 No Truce in Sight

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 12.—The terrorism of Palestine's Arab rebellion tonight took the lives of several Arab government officials and Moslem civilians, supposedly slain by young Arab zealots enraged by their refusal to support the revolt.

The rebels were in control of ancient Bethlehem, crumbling city of Christ's birth, after forcing British authorities to abandon the police post, postoffice and law courts there.

The slaying of old Arab leaders, who have lost their influence over the young nationalists, occurred in Haifa, Samaria and Jaffa where sabotage of government property also was reported.

Clashes Kill 25

[In the last 24 hours, according to the Associated Press, 25 Arabs were killed in various clashes—Editor's Note.]

The heaviest fighting today was around Bethlehem. Reinforced British troops, including the "Ladies from Hell" of the famous Black Watch, held some parts of Bethlehem.

Sandbag barricades were thrown up in the sacred city and Royal Air Force planes, setting out to bomb and machine-gun the rebel bands, roared overhead.

A squadron of planes aided troops in a clash with Arabs on the Hebron road south of Bethlehem and heavy casualties were reported.

Soldier Slain

In another clash between a military patrol and armed Arab band near Bethlehem, one soldier was killed and one was wounded. The Arabs fled with an unestimated number of dead and wounded.

The British High Commissioner's office reported to the Colonial Office in London that British troops at Nablus, 30 miles north of Jerusalem, shot and killed six Arabs. The Arabs had fired on the troops while the latter were destroying a house which had harbored snipers.

After the British abandonment of the Bethlehem police station, postoffice and courts of law, the rebels established their own courts in nearby fields, among olive trees and herds of sheep.

The British had barricaded the site of Rachel's Tomb at the entrance to Bethlehem, commanding entrance to the town's narrow, crooked streets.

There was no truce in sight. All terms of peace offered by Arab leaders have demanded that Jewish immigration stop.

The Damascus-Palestine Committee for Arab Defense warned Chaim Weizmann, president of the Zionist Federation in London, that his fight for Jewish rights was "causing anti-Jewish feeling in Arab neighboring countries where British bayonets cannot protect Jews."

Ambition Is Peace

Weizmann replied today with the assertion that "Arab persecutions of Jews will only accentuate Zionism."

He said that "the present attitude of Arabs toward Jews indicates the fate of Jews as a minority" under the proposed Arab settlement plan, although he repeated that Jews were willing to live peaceably with Arabs if their rights were recognized.

The government, attempting to protect the lives of conservative Arabs, instituted a system of identity cards in an effort to counteract rebel tactics of forcing all Arabs to wear Bedouin headgear.

The use of the Bedouin burnous had baffled British military forces attempting to distinguish peaceful Arabs from the rebels.

Rail Wage Cut Held Betrayal Of Roosevelt

Harrison Is Witness
Mgr. Ryan Opposes Slash
Sees Business Peril

The 15 per cent wage cut proposed by the railroads was denounced by George Harrison, labor spokesman, yesterday as in direct conflict with President Roosevelt's recovery program.

The president of the Railway Labor Executives Association registered his objection before the Emergency Fact-Finding Board, which the President apointed in an effort to avert a strike.

"The President of the United States has made it known in unmistakable terms that industry and labor should unite to prevent wage reductions," he said. "We will not desert him."

Mgr. Ryan Opposes Cut

Mgr. John A. Ryan, president of the National Catholic Welfare Counsel, and the first witness for labor at the day's session, testified:

"A wage cut in this great national industry would contradict the present national policy and greatly retard, if not completely check, progress toward full business recovery," he testified.

Harrison detailed the attempts of a group representing labor and management to obtain "legislative relief" for railroads at the last session of Congress.

Harrison said President Roosevelt had asked a representative group to "develop a program for the railroad industry" and a "comprehensive program" was worked out which included loans to the railroads from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation without approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Blames Too Much Capital

"Then the railroad presidents announced after a meeting in Chicago they would demand a 15 per cent wage cut. They wanted to have their cake and eat it too. This killed the relief legislation."

Harrison said the financial difficulties of railroads arose from "more capital in the industry than the volume of business can hope to support."

The reorganization of many railroads with a resulting scaling down of fixed charges offers the best solution, he added.

He urged the board to segregate the Nation's railroads into three groups before passing judgment upon the wage cut. He said about one-third of the railroads was in sound financial shape and well able to pay present wages, while another third was in receivership or trusteeship and did not have to meet fixed charges.

"It's the middle group that is the problem child of the industry and the designation is not mine," he said. "It's that prepared by the Interstate Commerce Commission for a group appointed by President Roosevelt to study the industry."

Ford, Murphy Agree on Jobs

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP).—Henry Ford conferred today with Gov. Frank Murphy, and reached what Murphy announced as a "tentative agreement" by which the Michigan Reemployment Service may obtain jobs for unemployed men through the Ford Co.

Murphy said there was no connection between his visit and that of Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, who yesterday discussed 32-hour week proposals with Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director.

Wallace Plans Speaking Tour in Middle West
Editor Sees U. S. Fed Up With New Deal

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace revealed yesterday he will follow Secretary of Interior Ickes onto the political hustings with a series of Democratic campaign speeches through the Middle West beginning this week.

WALLACE

Asked if he would support any "liberal" Republicans," he laughed and said, "Well, I'll recognize their merits and shortcomings and hold out the right hand of fellowship."

The President recently indicated he preferred some liberal Republicans to conservative Democrats. Postmaster General Farley later spurned support for any but regular Democratic nominess.

Wallace said he would speak in South Dakota October 15; in Waterloo, Iowa, October 17 or 18, and later in Michigan, Ohio, and probably Pennsylvania. He said a speech in Illinois on Friday will be "nonpolitical." He said he would speak for Senator Gillette in Iowa, and didn't regard him as a "purge." Gillette won the nomination over Representative Wearin, who had Administration support.

Chicago, Oct. 12 (AP).—The United States is approaching a period in which it will have to digest its current political and social upheaval, Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, said today in an address to the American Life convention, an organization of insurance executives.

"Personally, I believe the New Deal has just about played out its hole cards," he said, and added his "guess" that President Roosevelt would not seek re-election.

Roberts said he believed much of the President's "anxiety over 1940 and the much-advertised purge campaign of this year has been due to his knowledge that the American people get fed up on reform eventually."

By the Associated Press

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said yesterday he would reintroduce in the 1939 Congress a bill sponsored by him and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming for Federal licensing of corporations. The authors have advanced it as a possible solution to the monopoly problem.

Meanwhile, at Chicago, Senator John E. Miller (Democrat), Arkansas, said the independent businessman either must suppress monopoly through fair trade practice acts "or the Government must take over the task of regulating the manufacture, sale and distribution of merchandise."

In an address prepared for delivery to the National Association of Retail Druggists, Miller urged public support of the Tydings-Miller fair practice act of which he was co-author. He said fair practice acts were an effort by the Government to maintain free and open competition in the sale of merchandise.

Fresh complaint of the "macing" of WPA supervisors and workers for Democratic campaign funds in Pennsylvania was lodged yesterday with the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee by Republican Senator James J. Davis. Senator Morris Sheppard, Democrat, of Texas, chairman of the committee, immediately promised a renewed inquiry.

The complaint of Senator Davis, buttressed by names and statements tended to show that Democratic leaders in Luzerne County the "shaking down" owners of trucks being used by the WPA to the tune of $100 for each truck. Senator Davis reported that workers getting meager wages were being forced to belong to "Democratic Clubs" with a $1.00 membership fee and monthly dues of $1.00.

NLRB Calls Edison-A. F. L. Pacts Illegal

C. I. O. Sees Unfairness
Supreme Court to Rule
Utility Seeks Reversal

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board told the Supreme Court yesterday that contracts between the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York and affiliates of the American Federation of Labor were "clearly illegal."

The board filed a brief in the case in which the utility and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers seek to invalidate a Labor Board order abrogating the Brotherhood's contracts.

The A. F. of L. filed a brief attacking the order and saying the Labor Board "has brazenly and by official act declared itself as a proponent of the C. I. O."

The board's order was issued in November, 1937, after the C. I. O. brought charges of unfair labor practices.

Their Contracts Listed

In answer to Consolidated Edison's contention that all of its business was within the State of New York and therefore not in interstate commerce, the board's brief said:

"The petitioner's operations are such that their cessation by reason of industrial strife would block interstate transportation to and from New York City on several main interstate railroads, and communications by telegraph, telephone and radio would be seriously affected."

The brief also said the company was engaged in interstate commerce "by reason of the purchase in other States of large quantities of coal and oil."

As to the validity of the contracts between the brotherhood and the utility, the brief said three contracts were consummated subsequent to the opening of the board's hearings June 3, 1937, and that all were consummated after service of the board complaint.

Contracts Held Illegal

"On the findings," said the brief, "the contracts are clearly illegal. Not only are they a part of a scheme by which the petitioner's employes were to be denied the right freely to chose their own representatives, but they are also the culminating objective of the whole unlawful campaign.

"The record is clear that the contracts were part and parcel of the petitioner's illegal purpose to select a representative for its employes, place that organization in a favored position in the plants, and perpetuate their interference with their employes' freedom of choice by maintaining it in that position."

Replying to the brotherhood's contention that it should have been a party to the proceedings before the board, the brief asserted:

"It is nowhere denied that the complaint and notice of hearing actually reached the petitioners. Prior to the hearing a copy of the notice was served upon the brotherhood. Having had actual knowledge of the proceedings, the petitioners (brotherhoods) could have availed themselves of the opportunity to intervene and participate. They chose not to do so."

150 Civic Leaders Pledged to Support Community Chest

One hundred and fifty civic leaders representing every section of the city last night pledged themselves and their organizations to support the Community Chest campaign at a meeting at the National Press Club.

Among leaders of past Chest campaigns attending the gathering were H. L. Rust, jr., Joseph ("Radio Joe") Kaufman, J. Bernard Wychoff and Chauncey G. Parker, jr., chairmen of the metropolitan units of past years.

Other honor guests included William J. Flather, jr., chairman of the 1938 campaign; Morris Cafritz, vice chairman; Mrs. G. Howland Chase, chairman of the "go and see" tours; Herbert L. Willett, Chest director; Randolph G. Bishop, assistant director, and George Pennell, secretary of the metropolitan unit.

Bar Hits Banks' Practice of Law

Warning that probate matters may become a monopoly of banks and trust companies, Richard L. Merrick, chairman of the District Bar Association's committee on suppression of unauthorized practice of the law, urged the Court of Appeals yesterday to keep corporations out of such practice by invoking the court's "inherent power to regulate the bar."

Merrick and Leo A. Rover, former district attorney, argued the appeal of an action by himself and others of the bar committee against the American Security & Trust Co.

G. Bowdoin Craighill, for the trust company, argued that it did not "practice law" and that its activities for its customers and their estates were incidental to its functions as a fiduciary institution, which were authorized by its charter.

Social Security Plan to Include 16 Million More

Liberalization Sought
Aimed at Critics
Balks Pension Schemes

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

The Social Security Board will shortly hand President Roosevelt a seven-point program for expansion and liberalization of the old-age pension system to embrace 16,000,000 additional persons, it was learned last night.

The recommendations were requested by Roosevelt and the Advisory Council on Social Security, which meets here October 21, and are expected to be submitted to Congress when it convenes on January 3.

They are designed to head off so-called "crackpot" pension schemes, which Mr. Roosevelt has condemned as "shot cuts to utopia," and at the same time mollify Congressional critics who have assailed portions of the social security program.

Backs Beginning in 1940

The recommendations follow:

Benefit payments for aged wives, widows, and young children of insured persons dying before reaching the specified retirement age of 65 years.

Beginning of old-age benefit payments in 1940 instead of January 1, 1942 under the present act.

Extending old-age pensions provisions to farm laborers, domestic servants, self-employed persons, Federal Reserve System bank employes, American seamen and employes of charitable institutions.

Broadening the minimum old-age pension base of $10 monthly to provide larger benefits for those retiring during the earlier years of the system. The present benefit scale ranges from $10 to $85 monthly, depending upon the amount paid in by employe and employer. The proposed new scale would range from $30 to $80.

Raising the present Federal grant of one-third to States for care of dependent children to one-half.

$200,000 Allotted For Defense Study

By the Associated Press.

PWA Administrator Ickes allotted $200,000 yesterday to finance a national defense power study by the War Department.

The study, Ickes said, would include research into engineering and economic problems, preparation of cost estimates, operating and administrative expenses and methods of financing.

Germany's Lure Of More Trade Leaves Hull Cold

Despite the lure of an augmented market for American goods, held out by Germany, Secretary of State Hull yesterday remained firm on his previous declarations against a bilateral trade agreement with the Reich.

Pointing out that the German system of barter and bi-lateralism meant no real increase in world trade, the Secretary has said that such a plan was directly contrary to the principles followed by the United States in its reciprocal trade program, which includes the most-favored-nation provision.

At Berlin, economists were quoted by the Associated Press as having said Germany could use 4,000,000 bales of cotton, metals, finished goods, wheat, lard and other American products.

Patient Recovers, Tree Surgeon Hurt

Greenport, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP).—George Miller, 59, a tree surgeon, was double-crossed by a patient yesterday. He was siting on the upper part of an uprooted tree sawing off a limb. Severance of the limb caused the tree to snap back to an upright position, tossing Miller into the air. He suffered internal injuries.

Wreath Laid At Monument Of Columbus

K. of C., Troops March Henry Quinn Speaks Praises Freedom Here

More than 2,500 men—uniformed troops from Fort Myer and of the Knights of Columbus—marched down Massachusetts avenue to Union Station Plaza last night to pay homage at the stone figure of Christopher Columbus on the 446th anniversary of his discovery of the western world.

They heard Henry I. Quinn, former president of the Board of Education, plea for preservation of the democratic institutions.

"We should thank God," he said, "we live in a land where differences of opinion may be settled without bitterness, where a man may worship according to his conscience without fear of persecution."

By way of contrast he referred to conditions under European dictators, reminding the gathering, by inference, of the rioting at the palace of Cardinal Innitzer in Vienna.

Pleads for Labor Peace

Quinn made a plea for industrial peace which, he said, would come only when name calling and the arousing of class hatreds are abandoned.

In the parade which marched from Knights of Columbus headquarters at Tenth and K streets northwest, were delegations from Maryland and Virginia and bands of Georgetown and Catholic universities, St. John's College, the Elks and the National Guard.

Another speaker at the exercises was Andres Pastoriza, minister of the Dominican Republic, who told of the projected $1,500,000 memorial lighthouse to Columbus near Ciudad Trujillo.

Wreath Is Placed

The invocation was given by the Right Rev. Michael J. Riordan, pastor of St. Martin's Church, and the benediction by the Rev. William R. Arnold, chief of Army chaplains. Col. Thomas F. Carlin, State Knights of Columbus deputy, placed a wreath at the base of the memorial on behalf of more than 700,000 members of the organization.

Observance of the holiday began at 10 a. m. with wreath-laying ceremonies sponsored by the Order of the Sons of Italy Lodge, No. 1306. L. H. Pasqualicchio, president of the society, laid the wreath, accompanied by Dr. V. Bifuloco, consul of the Italian Embassy.

Slain Girl's Coat Is Found Near Her Home

Sodden With Blood Sex Maniac Sought His Voice Is Clew

By the Associated Press.

Larchmont, N. Y., Oct. 12.—Detectives today found the stained brown coat of Mary Imelda Coyle, pretty 17-year-old victim of a sex maniac, within 100 yards of the houseboat where she lived with her mother and two sisters in New Rochelle.

The coat was sodden with blood, as though it had been used to conceal the battered features of the quiet parochial school graduate after she was slain Monday night.

Her body, the skull battered by half a dozen blows with a blunt instrument, was found early yesterday behind a Larchmont movie theater.

Beret, Beads Still Missing

Discovery of the coat led authorities to believe that Mary Imelda was waylaid by the assailant on her way from devotional services at a Catholic church.

Still missing were the girl's beret and beads.

Police broadcast an 8-State alarm for a blood-stained motorcar on the strength of indications that her body was transported from the murder scene, probably in New Rochelle, to the spot behind the theater.

Westchester County authorities organized the most intensive search since the kidnap-slaying of 12-year-old Peter Levine last spring

Voice Is Clew

Clews included:

The voice of the killer, who choked off Mary's desperate cries for help, which police hoped might again be recognized by a woman who heard a girl's screams at 1:30 a. m.

Between 10 and 15 strands of brown hair, each about four inches long and without the reddish tint characterized by that of the victim, found clutched in her hand.

Mary, pledged to become a nun, was believed by police to have met her death at the hands of someone she knew and trusted.

New Jersey Oil Town Fire Rages Out of Control; Flames Shoot 500 Feet High; Scores Injured

By the Associated Press.

Linden, N. J., Oct. 12.—An eight-acre inferno of flaming oil and bursting tanks raged out of control tonight as 1,500 firemen and volunteers worked at a killing pace to keep the fire from enveloping one of the Nation's largest oil centers.

Flames burst 500 feet in the air from 22 burning tanks in the Cities Service Co.'s "oil village" where the fire was touched off by an explosion of a 1,680,000-gallon tank today.

A half-dozen more explosions followed in rapid succession, shaking buildings over a wide area.

Fire-smothering foam spouted from scores of hoselines to keep the fire from spreading to the company's huge oil distillery across the railroad tracks and on the shore of the Arthur Kill, a narrow strait that separates New Jersey from New York City's Staten Island.

Distillery Threatened

The distillery and 30 large-sized tanks surrounding it were threatened anew at midnight when the seams gave way in a 3,780,000-gallon fuel oil tank—the largest one ablaze in the refinery yard to which the fire so far had been confined—and the oil spilled out on the tracks which had served as a barrier to spread of the flames.

The 22 destroyed tanks—some of which had burned out by midnight into crumbling skeletons—ranged from 5,000 to 90,000 barrel capacity.

As far as can be ascertained, no one was trapped in the blaze.

A brief and sudden shift in the wind tonight blew the flames into the adjoining "tank farm" of the Sinclair Oil Co. where a pipe house and oil storage house were consumed.

Beyond the Sinclair yard lies the massive plant of the Standard Oil Co., and fire officials for a time feared a general conflagration until the wind shifted back again.

25,000 Watch Flames

Unofficial estimates of damage already done ran from $1,000,000 upward.

Trucks and fire apparatus sped from storage depots many miles away, bringing fresh supplies of chemicals to spread a foamy blanket over the blazing oil.

Dense crowds—estimated by police at more than 25,000—were attracted by the pillar of flame and dense smoke pall, and their autos blocked roads for miles around.

There were numerous injuries among the fire fighters, but only three were hurt seriously enough to be recorded by physicians who manned ambulances and first-aid stations.

Fireman Jack Julian, of Linden, injured in a fall off a ladder, was taken to a hospital. Two Cities Service employes were treated for cuts and burns.

Twenty firemen suffered slight burns in a sudden flare of flame. All returned to duty after treatment. Police estimated about two score spectators suffered slight cuts and bruises, most of them in falls while running.

The cause of the initial explosion in the crude oil tank was undetermined. Other burning tanks contained crude oil, furnace oil, refined oil and gasoline.

A company spokesman said approximately 300 were working at the plant at the time of the first explosion.

Sixteen years ago last June, the "tank farm," then owned by the Warner-Quinlan Co. which has been taken over by Cities Service, was destroyed with a $3,000,000 loss, a Cities Service spokesman said. That fire, he added, raged for two days.

He estimated the value of the present "village" at $5,000,000.

Clustered around the burning acre are plants of the Standard Oil Co., Sinclair, the American Cyanamid Co.—whose employes were forced to evacuate because of the heat—American Grasselli Chemical Co., and the General Aniline (Dye) Co.

The two employes injured were William Granse, 30, of Elizabeth, and William Borden, 24, of Linden.

Dr. R. F. Osborne Hangs Himself At Hospital

Dr. Raymond F. Osborne, 41, a physician here for nearly 20 years, was found dead yesterday, hanging from the limb of a dogwood tree at the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital, near Baltimore. Magistrate Norman H. Angell, of Towson, gave a verdict of suicide.

Hospital officials said Dr. Osborne failed to appear for lunch at noon. He was allowed freedom of the grounds, but a search party was organized after his absence became prolonged. He had been a patient for nervous trouble since October 14.

Towson police said the physician hanged himself by knotting a shirt around his neck and dropping from a limb. A torn necktie found nearby indicated that a previous effort had failed.

Hospital officials immediately notified the physician's wife, the former Violet Stanton. Dr. Osborne was a native of Washington and a graduate of Georgetown University. He had two children, one 7 years old, and one 12. Funeral services will be arranged later.

9 Bombers Push Through To 'Air Base'

By Barry Sullivan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fort Bragg, N. C., Oct. 12.—Protected by 12 of the Army's newest attack planes and aided by a high heavy fog, nine "enemy" bombers smashed through to the hypothetical air base here late today.

As part of the night exercises, searchlights went into action to spot the advancing planes from Langley Field, Va., acting as the enemy in five days of joint Air Corps and antiaircraft maneuvers. Several of the guns were ordered into action, even though the lights, which thrust their beams 20,000 feet, were unable to pick up the attackers on account of the fog.

Tonight civilians over an area of 8,000 square miles awaited for the alarm that would throw their towns, their villages and their farms into darkness in the most ambitious "blackout" ever attempted in the United States. Civilian spotters, listening from rooftops, will report the first faint drone of an approaching enemy, notify headquarters here and word will go out by telephone, radio and fast automobile to douse all lights.

Dies to Open Sit-Down Inquiry Here Next Week

Detroit, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—The House committee investigating un-American activities will begin in Washington next week a general inquiry into the major sit-down strikes of recent years, Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, said tonight.

After conducting hearings in Detroit for two days, Dies concluded that the investigation into charges which alleged that sit-down strikes were engineered by Communists on orders from Moscow was of too broad a scope to be conducted from one sectional point. He said the sit-down investigation would be localized in Washington and that witnesses from Michigan, Ohio, and other areas where sit-downs have occurred would be summoned there to testify.

Text of Pope's Greeting to Catholic U.

Asks Civic Teaching
Recalls Pioneers
Cites Perils to Church

By the Associated Press.

The text of Pope Pius' apostolic letter today to Catholic prelates in the United States follows:

The Golden Jubilee which the Catholic University of America is preparing to celebrate with fitting ceremony is an event of such outstanding importance in the life of the church in the United States that it has seemed good to us, our beloved sons and venerable brethren to address you again for the purpose of expressing our joy at the completion of a half-century of fruitful labor and of giving further utterance to the hopes which we cherish for the future of this great institution of learning.

During the almost 50 years of its existence the Catholic University has done well. Despite the difficulties which attend beginnings and in the face of material limitations which might have discouraged men laboring in a less worthy cause, the superiors and teaching staff, by their intelligence and devotion, have won for the university a leading place in the great Catholic educational system of America and among the other similar schools of the land.

We know that the names of these noble pioneers, many of whom have passed to their eternal reward, are held in benediction by those who have taken their places, and that with seemly gratitude they will be recalled in prayer and eulogy during the days of the jubilee.

However, the celebration of this jubilee will be not alone one of retrospect and of commemoration, but also and principally one of prospect and of dedication. Indeed, the chief reason which has moved us to signalize the observances by this further evidence of our profound interest is the conviction that in the years which lie ahead, the Catholic University is called to assume still greater and more momentous responsibilities than in the past.

The world has entered upon one of those periods of unrest, of questioning, of disorientation and of conflict which have been well described as turning points of history. Christian doctrine and Christian morality are under attack from several quarters; dangerous theories which a few years ago were but whispered in the secret conventicles of discontent are today preached from the housetops, and are even finding their way into action; private immorality and public subversion have in many places raised the banner of revolt against the cross of Christ.

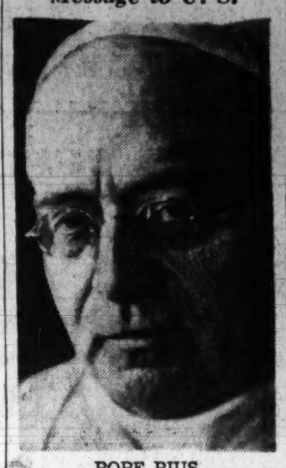
It is a source of deep consolation to us, as it must be to you, our beloved sons and venerable brethren, that the church in America is so well prepared to meet the challenge of these critical times, and that in The Catholic University we possess such an admirable instrument for the exposing of error and for the dissemination of Christian truth. Through the university it will be possible to bring to bear upon the most pressing problems of the day the full force of those principles of justice and charity in which alone they will find their solution. In the course of our pontificate, we have had occasion to treat these problems more than once in our encyclical letters; here we wish only to point out the solid basis upon which our teaching rests.

Since the sciences of civics, sociology and economics deal with individual collective human welfare, they cannot escape from the philosophical and religious implications of man's origin, nature and destiny. If they ignore God, they can never hope to understand adequately the creature which He formed in His own image and likeness, and whom He sent His own Divine Son to redeem. Christian teaching alone, in its majestic integrity, can give full meaning and compelling motive to the demand for human rights and liberties because it alone gives worth and dignity to human personality.

In consequence of his high conception of the nature and gifts of man, the Catholic is necessarily the champion of true human rights and the defender of true human liberties; it is in the name of God himself that he cries out against any civic philosophy which would degrade man to the position of a soulless pawn in a sordid game of power and prestige, or would seek to banish him from membership in the human family; it is in the same holy name that he opposes any social philosophy which would regard man as a mere chattel in commercial competition for profit, or would set him at the throat of his fellows in a blind, brutish class struggle for existence.

The Catholic University, then, because it is Catholic, has the traditional mission of guarding the natural and supernatural heritage of man. In the fulfillment of this sublime mission it must, because of the exigencies of the present age, give special attention to the sciences of civics, sociology and economics. The encyclical letters which we have already referred deal with the modern problems in these fields, and apply to them the unchanging principles of philosophy and religion. With these encyclicals as the basis of study and research, the university can evolve a constructive program of social action, fitted in its details to local needs, which will command the admiration and acceptance of all right-thinking men.

Message to U. S.



POPE PIUS

Salutary Influence

It is our earnest desire, our beloved sons and venerable brethren, that under your patronage and direction the schools of the above-mentioned sciences be developed to the highest possible point of excellence so that men will naturally turn to the university for enlightenment and guidance on social questions. With expanded and improved facilities, with an increased corps of distinguished professors whose lectures, consultations and writings carry authority, and with picked groups of talented students from all parts of the country, it will be possible to achieve the desired eminence, and to exercise thus a salutary Christian influence upon contemporary society.

That the material resources required for the accomplishment of a mission fraught with such immense importance for the well-being of your country may not be lacking, we again repeat the warm recommendation which we made in our former letter to you, our beloved sons and venerable brethren: That nothing be left undone to place before the faithful the needs of this national center of Christian culture. In a special way, we commend to you this cause which is so near our heart, and we leave it in your hands, secure in the confidence that you will, individually and severally, take the steps necessary to endow and maintain the university on a scale commensurate with the importance of its mission.

In testimony of our predilection, and as a pledge that divine light and favor may be vouchsafed you in measure proportioned to your sacred undertaking, from our heart we impart to you, our beloved sons and venerable brethren, to the clergy and people confided to your vigilant care, and in particular to the superiors, professors and students of the Catholic University, our affectionate apostolic benediction.

Women Deny Usurpation Of Men's Jobs

Women

census chief copies of the pamphlet published as a result of the study, and told the latter:

"I wish you might have had an opportunity to read it before making your report public. Then you would have had a true picture of why business and professional women work—namely, to support themselves and those dependent upon them."

President Roosevelt revealed at his press conference on Tuesday that he was giving much thought to Biggers' figures on women workers. The postcard survey of the jobless showed there were 2,740,000 more women at work than had been anticipated on the basis of the 1930 census. He estimated that 39,278,000 men and 14,496,000 were in the labor market.

Commitee Study Urged

He recommended that the President turn over the data on women workers to the economic or "monopoly" committee, which is studying practically all phases of the Nation's economic life.

Asked by a reporter whether he contemplated such action, Mr. Roosevelt said it was a problem whether to submit the data to the committee now or wait for a breakdown of them, with information as to the cause of so many women in employment, to be obtained in the regular 1940 census.

He said he hesitated to take the figures without an analysis which would show, among other things, how many of the women were required to seek employment by the depression, what percentage returned to work because their husbands or other menfolk lost their jobs, and how many had gone to work for the first time.

The question of immediate use of the figures remains to be determined, the President added.

Science Mourns As College-Bred 'Possums Vanish

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12 (AP).—Five opossums with jittery nerves disappeared from their exercise yard at the psychological laboratories of St. John's College and professors feared they had become an experiment in roasting.

The experiments testing reactions of the marsupials were conducted by Dr. John L. Finan and associates in the psychology department. When the animals showed temperament they were placed in an outdoor pen to recuperate.

Dr. Finan would appreciate, for the sake of science, being informed if the five temperamental 'possums taste differently than normal ones.

troublesome FCC, is understood to have planned to install William J. Dempsey, his special legal aide, in the job.

Dempsey, 32 years old, is a son of Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, and was engaged by McNinch as special counsel for the commission in the radio monopoly investigation scheduled to start October 24. Dempsey formerly was an assistant solicitor of the Power Commission.

Gary, who is 65, was one of the first appointees to the Federal Communications Commission, but served only six months because of the irregular appointment system adopted for the seven members. He has been general counsel of the FCC for almost four years.

Was Envoy to Egypt

A native of Texas and a member of a distinguished family that goes back to a general in the Revolutionary War, Gary served as special counsel and later as solicitor in the State Department under President Wilson. With the entrance of the United States in the World War he was named Envoy to Egypt.

Later he was sent to Switzerland as Minister because of his knowledge of international problems arising from the peace conference. At the conclusion of his diplomatic career, Gary practiced law in Washington and New York City.

Commissioners George Henry Payne and T. A. M. Craven, who fought Chairman McNinch on his move to take all important FCC jobs out of civil service, were understood to be prepared to fight for Gary as well.

Supporting the chairman, it was learned, are former Judge Eugene O. Sykes, veteran hold-over from the Federal Radio Commission, and Commissioner Thad H. Brown, a Republican appointee from Ohio.

Commissioner Paul Walker was said to be undecided. Commissioner Norman S. Case is ill in New England.

McNinch was reported to have offered Gary a position in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation if he would resign without protest. The position, it was said, would pay as much or more than the $9,000 job as general counsel of the FCC.

Long a sore spot in the Administration, the Federal Communications Commission has been in almost constant turmoil since its creation in 1935. Several times congressional investigations have been threatened, only to be sidetracked by Administration pressure.

A year ago President Roosevelt asked McNinch to take over the task of "cleaning house" and bringing to an end intra-commission friction that had grown up under the late Anning S. Prall.

This week the President admitted at a press conference that there is still considerable friction among the commissioners.

McNinch's only comment on the situation was:

"I've been in tough jobs before."

McNinch, a Presbyterian deacon from North Carolina, first became a Federal office-holder under President Hoover after he had joined in his State's revolt against the Democratic nomination of Alfred E. Smith. He was appointed a member of the Federal Power Commission in 1930 and elevated to its chairmanship in 1933 by Roosevelt.

Interstate Commerce Industry Clerks Ruled Under Wage Bill

the stream of interstate commerce are also included in the phrase 'engaged in commerce'—for example, employes of a warehouse whose storage facilities are used in the interstate distribution of goods," Andrews said.

He explained that the law applies to employes even if they did not engage in actual "physical" work on the product if they were engaged in any capacity in "producing, manufacturing, mining, handling or in any other manner working on such goods."

Some Plants Exempt

"Therefore, the benefits of the statute are extened to such employes as maintenance workers, watchmen, clerks, stenographers, messengers, all of whom must be considered as engaged in processes or occupations 'necessary to the production' of goods," he said.

"Enterprises cannot operate without employes of this kind. If they were not doing work 'necessary to the production' of the goods they would not be on the payroll."

He called attention to sections requiring employers to furnish burden of proof that specific employes should not be included "because they do not contribute to the production of the goods for interstate commerce."

"The act does not cover plants where the employes work on raw materials derived from within the State and where none of the products of the plant moves in interstate commerce," he said. "This is true, even though the product so manufactured and sold locally comes in competition with similar products which have been manufactured elsewhere and have moved in interstate commerce."

Veterans Urge Dictatorship For France

Would Last Till 1940
All Political Faiths Unite
Control Vote Majority

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 12.—Nearly 6,000,000 war veterans, who claim to control more than half of France's voting strength, tonight swung behind Leftist Leader Henri Pinchot's demand for a "national salvation" government which would rule until 1940 with virtually dictatorial powers.

Pinchot, who is president of the Federal Union of War Veterans and leads 1,500,000 leftist former service men, was supported during the day by the presidents of three other veterans' organizations of widely separated political alignments.

The veterans' demands, in the form of a manifesto, foreshadowed a nation-wide movement for a new government on nonpartisan lines empowered with full plenary powers to govern until the 1940 elections.

Would End Parliament

Premier Daladier has not opposed the movement, and it was speculated that he might even support it as means of finding unity for a program of new European alignments.

Under the plan, Parliament would be dissolved.

Nominally, the veterans control about 6,000,000 of France's 11,000,000 popular votes. If the plon is accepted, it was indicated that the new government would proceed on a program envisaging:

Restoration of national finances, economic recovery through increased production, an end of social and labor unrest, a new definition of French foreign policy and throwing of all the nation's energies into a rearmament program.

New Arms Fund

Paris, Oct. 12 (AP).—The French government decided today to bolster the army and navy against Germany's growing force with an additional expenditure of 2,307,000,000 francs ($62,289,000).

The cabinet, in the face of an already swollen national defense budget, authorized Premier Daladier to spend an additional 1,420,000,000 francs ($38,340,000) for the army and 887,000,000 francs ($23,949,000) for the navy.

The Daladier government's decision to increase the national defense expenditures was considered France's answer to the growing Siegfried Line on the opposite side of the French-German frontier.

Parliament previously had allotted 25,945,000,000 francs (about $874,570,000) for national defense expenditures in 1938.

As the nation moved to strengthen her arms, a step was taken toward bolstering alliances impaired by the Czechoslovak crisis. The cabinet named Andre Francois-Poncet, French envoy in Berlin, the new ambassador to Rome with the delicate task of trying to convert Italy from a potential enemy to a potential ally.

The ministers said Robert Coulondre, ambassador to Moscow, had been selected to take over the Berlin embassy.

Nazis Threaten New Armaments, Blame Britain

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—Indications of increased German armaments in view of new Franco-British measures were given tonight in inspired editorials in German newspapers. France, especially Great Britain are held responsible for the development.

The Voelkischer Beobachter said that with complementary "war agitation of the Churchill-Eden group" there can be no doubt that certain circles across the channel are in a very frivolous game."

The Frankfurter Zeitung complained of the "feverish speed" of British armaments, and "the propaganda-like emphasis" wherewith Leslie Hore-Belisha proclaimed the reorganization of the territorial army, and France prepared for a second and third Maginot line. "Germany cannot watch the new armament race in England and France indifferently."

Hitler Has Got All He Sought At Godesberg, Map Shows

Commission Sends Official Chart to London
Gains Not the Same But Just as Big 15 Miles Nearer Prague Than He Asked

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 12.—An official map received in London today disclosed that Reichsfuehrer Hitler had carried his new frontier with Czechoslovakia forward to lines corresponding roughly to those of his Godesberg map which Premier Minister Chamberlain refused to accept.

The map came from the International Sudetenland Commission now sitting in Berlin and shows the limits of the fifth zone of German occupation approved by the commission.

The new frontier gives Germany an area approximately equal to that of the Godesberg demands, although only in a few cases do the lines coincide with the Godesberg lines. There are variations of 5 to 10 miles either way throughout.

Move Nearer Prague

At the Munich conference and afterward it was asserted in British quarters that Hitler had not gained all he asked of Chamberlain at Godesberg on the Rhine, September 22.

The Big Four at Munich—Hitler, Chamberlain and Premiers Deladier and Mussolini, of France and Italy—turned over to the commission the task of drawing the limits of the fifth zone.

Germany's biggest gain, according to the commission's map, was made north of Prague, where the final settlement puts the border 25 miles from the Czechoslovak capital and 10 to 15 miles south of the Godesberg line.

Czechs Retain Pilsen

On the other hand, the Czechs gained near Pilsen, where the frontier will not enter the town, as it was expected to do.

The feeling is growing in informed London quarters that Germany might be satisfied with the Czech concessions already embodied in the fifth zone, and that plebiscites in additional territory might be waived.

The commission's map, however, showed areas in which plebiscites might be held.

Inquiry by Dies Asked on Lewis' Talk in Mexico

By the United Press.

Howard W. Barclay, editor of the magazine, Mill and Factory, last night asked the House committee investigating unAmerican activities to summon Chairman John L. Lewis of the Committee for Industrial Organization to explain statements he allegedly made at the recent international labor congress at Mexico City.

The New York editor wrote Committee Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, that Lewis told the Congress that "reactionary employers and their satellites would welcome the triumph of fascism in America." He urged the committee to invite Lewis to appear "to substantiate or disprove" the statement.

Duce Joins Hitler In Defying British Anti-Fascists

Rome, Oct. 12 (AP).—Premier Mussolini joined Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany today in defying French and British elements he labeled warmongering enemies of Fascists.

Informazione Diplomatica, in an article believed written by Il Duce himself, warned French and British anti-Fascists against hoping for a "preventive war" against Italy and Germany.

The article was inspired by the Hitler speech at Saarbruecken last Sunday in which he said Germany wanted peace, but would rearm, because "there are those abroad who do not want peace." The article was interpreted as being aimed particularly at anti-dictator sentiment in Britain, led by Anthony Eden and Alfred Duff Cooper.

Innitzer Must Change Ways, Nazis Declare

Press Attacks Cardinal
Charges 'Provocation'
Hints Double Dealing

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Oct. 12.—Nazis warned tonight that "an end must be put to the methods" of Theodore Cardinal Innitzer.

The warning was published in the Nazi organ, Wiener Neueste Nachrichten.

It was the first editorial cogizance Nazis have taken of Cardinal Innitzer's sermon last Friday and the subsequent storming of his palace which resulted in broken windows, much interior damage, a wound to the cardinal from a thrown stone, and the injury of one of the canons.

Neueste Nachrichten said: "We are going on our way even without the consent of the last adherent of Austrian clericalism . . .

"We do not intend, however, to permit ourselves to be continuously in a state of anger. An end must be put to the methods of the Herr Cardinal who first shows a velvet hand in readiness to talk things over and then incites political quarrels."

This was taken as a reference to Innitzer's visit to Reichsfuehrer Hitler immediately after the anschluss of Austria and Germany last March and his letter to Nazi officials which he signed "Heil Hitler"—a department from the custom of German bishops. He also urged Austrian Catholics to vote for anschluss in the plebiscite that followed.

"We do not wonder that people reacted with loud ill-humor" to the Cardinal's Friday sermon, Neueste Nachrichten went on. "Greater provocation would be hard to imagine and one which, with open and concealed words, attacks the Fuehrer of the German people at a time when he realized our finest objective."

The editorial was not the only evidence of Nazi displeasure.

The last issue of the Kirchliche Wandzeitung, a diocese publication displayed on bulletin boards outside churches, was seized tonight.

No reason was given for the confiscations. The one-sheet paper usually contains nothing more than short notices to parishioners.

The Papal Nuncio to Germany, Mgr. Cesare Orsenigo, was reported to have flown here yesterday for a conference with the cardinal on the Nazi mob's violence.

Guards were kept at all church doors throughout the night. Cardinal Innitzer himself was surrounded by detectives, but it was insisted officially he was not regarded as a prisoner.

An anonymous mimeographed leaflet put into Vienna mail boxes secretly gave details of the mob violence which Vienna newspapers have not been permitted to print.

In addition to relating how the archepiscopal palace was stoned and invaded, the leaflet said Innitzer's bishop's ring and chain, as well as many precious church vestments, were missing since attack.

Officials said Innitzer's freedom was proved yesterday when he walked across St. Stephen's Square to attend a meeting of parish delegates. A few loungers shouted, "Pull, Innitzer!" when the cardinal passed. One report said a Nazi slapped one of the cardinal's accompanying canons.

Italian Warships To Escort 10,000 Leaving Spain

Special Cable to The Post.

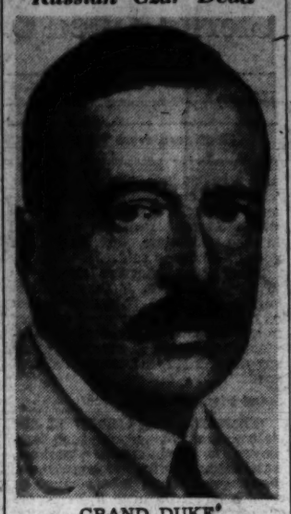
Rome, Oct. 12.—A squadron of warships will escort the 10,000 Italian volunteers returning from Spain October 20, who will be hailed as national heroes, it was announced today. King Victor Emmanuel will meet them at Naples.

The total Italian casualties up to October 10, are officially given as 12,147, in detail as follows: Officers killed, 227; officers wounded, 697; other ranks killed, 2,430; wounded, 8,161; died of wounds, 278. This does not include some 7,000 invalided home.

Neutral observers remarked that the present withdrawal of volunteers brings back all those who went to Spain before the nonintervention agreement was signed in February, 1937, which prohibited the further dispatch of troops to that country. The remaining 30,000 Italians were all sent to Spain after this agreement.

Hendaye, France (At the Spanish Frontier), Oct. 12 (AP).—Columbus Day found both sides in Spain's civil war celebrating festively with expressions of friendliness to the new world, but their troops fought violently on the northeastern Ebro River front.

Russian 'Czar' Dead



GRAND DUKE CYRIL VLADIMIROVITCH,

Cyril, Claimant Of Russian Throne, Dies

In Exile 21 Years
Gangrene Is Fatal
Son Now Pretender

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 12.—Proud and handsome Grand Duke Cyril Vladimirovitch, pretender to the vanished Russian throne, died in exile today and thousands of mourning White Russians who called him Czar of All the Russians looked for leadership tonight to his son and heir, 21-year-old Vladimir Cyrollovitch.

An exile since the Bolshevist revolution 21 years ago, the 62-year-old pretender had been seriously ill for two weeks with gangrene of one leg. He died in the American Hospital in the presence of members of his family and a few close friends.

Most White Russians living like himself in exile accepted his claim to be Emperor and head of the House of Romanoff. The grand duke was a cousin of the late Czar Nicholas II, last of the dynasty to reign.

When the grand duke proclaimed himselz czar in 1924 he named his son, Grand Duke Vladimir, heir to the non-existent throne. Cyril repeatedly expressed his confidence that the Russian monarchy would be restored and on January 3, 1933, he asked the Russian army in a manifesto to stand ready to overthrow Soviet rule.

News of his death sped quickly through the large colony of Russian exiles in Paris. Various White Russian organizations called meetings to proclaim Vladimir their "czar."

His right to the title, however, is contested by the Grand Duke Dmitri Pavlovitch, Cyril's cousin, who claims to be head of the Romanoffs, and some have chosen to follow him. Dmitri's followers indicated that he would press his claims anew in view of Cyril's death.

LaGuardia's Name Met With Boos At Italian Meeting

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—A crowd of 10,000 Italian-Americans today mixed boos for Mayor LaGuardia with shouts of "Viva Mussolini!" at Columbus Day exercises in Columbus Circle.

Deputy Fire Commissioner Francis X. Giaccone was shouted down when he attempted to speak for the mayor, who is ill at his home.

District Attorney Dewey, Republican candidate for Governor, and his Democratic opponent, Gov. Lehman, addressed the crowd.

Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo was vigorously applauded when he declared "Our President should be congratulated for his efforts toward world peace, and I am glad that it was Mussolini himself who intervened at the right moment and brought peace to the world."

The cause of the hostility against LaGuardia, himself of Italian descent, was not apparent. Some officials said it might have been based on LaGuardia's verbal attacks on Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Hitler Speech Blow to Peace, Says Briton

Bernays Is Spokesman
Premier's Hand Seen
Increased Arms Urged

By Joseph Driscoll
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Oct. 12.—A British government spokesman today delivered a polite rebuke to Reichsfuehrer Hitler for his fighting speech about Britain last Sunday, in which der Fuehrer accused such Britons as Anthony Eden, Alfred Duff Cooper and Winston Churchill, of plotting a new world war against Germany.

Robert Bernays, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Health, a rising young man who may be promoted to the cabinet before long, was believed speaking for Prime Minister Chamberlain as well, when he said:

"From the agreement concluded by Mr. Chamberlain at Munich, it is to be hoped that something far wider and more comprehensive will develop . . ."

Hitler No Help

"It cannot be said that Herr Hitler's speech at Saarbruecken is a helpful contribution to that effort . . . The tone of Herr Hitler's speech is a proof, if proof were needed, of the wisdom of the prime minister's warning that his policy of appeasement must be backed by increased arms strength."

That the prime minister is making up his mind that there is a limit beyond which he will not retreat regardless of German menaces was intimated when Bernays said:

"Never in our history has it been more necessary for Great Britain to demonstrate that while we are willing to strain every nerve for European settlement there is a line from which no threats, however formidable, will cause her to retreat.

Gestpite to Russia

"If that is understood, then the initial and preliminary four-power agreement, from which he hoped to much, can be turned into a general conference of the powers, including Russia, for a general settlement of European problems."

Co-operation with Russia would be significant of British disillusionment with the Munich peace. Soviet Russia was not invited to the four-power conference at Munich which made it easy for Hitler to carve up Czechoslovakia.

Spain Trotskyist Says Anti-Soviet Cash Went to U. S.

Barcelona, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Julian Gomez Garcia, one of the principal defendants in loyalist Spain's "Trotskyist treason" trial, today testified that funds were sent to the United States, Canada and Great Britain to help finance anti-Soviet and anti-Fascist activities.

Gomez is one of seven members of the P. O. U. M., or Party of Marxist Unification, on trial before a five-judge tribunal on charges of espionage and high treason.

Gomez said that funds were sent to groups abroad which were "interested in the same anti-Fascist and anti-Soviet ideals" as the Marxist Unification Party.

U. S. Investment Abroad 12 Million

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that at the beginning of 1938 Americans had $11,795,000,000 invested abroad and foreigners had $7,036,000,000 invested here.

American investments in foreign bonds totaled $5,033,000,000 on January 1, 1938. Of this sum, however, $1,244,000,000 was in complete default and $616,000,000 in partial default.

Slovaks Reject Land Demands Of Hungary

Czech

a newly created autonomous state in Czechoslovakia.

Informed quarters said the Hungarians were greatly surprised at this suggestion, and insisted upon immediate occupation by the Hungarian army of the heavily populated Hungarian areas.

Hungarian sources said Hungary wants territory that includes 840,000 Hungarians and only 145,000 Slovaks. Czechoslovak census figures, however, showed only 700,000 Hungarians in the territory demanded.

8,000 Square Miles Asked

Reliable previous indications have been that Hungary, spurred by German and Polish success in getting Czechoslovak territory, had demanded 8,000 square miles of southern Slovakia. The Slovaks were believed willing to cede only 2,000 square miles.

While the parley remained deadlocked, Czechoslovak nervousness and excitement mounted. Troop trucks rumbled through this city of 24,000 population which straddles the Danube. Gendarmes carrying rifles with fixed bayonets and Czech police forces were reinforced.

Both Czechoslovak and Hungarian troops on opposite sides of the Danube seemed prepared for open hostilities if the territorial negotiations fail.

Forces Strengthened

About 12,000 men moved into the border region today to strengthen Hungarian positions. Czechoslovak troops kept a close watch on their side of the border.

Other developments in the reorientation of the diminished Czechoslovak Republic included:

Establishment of Ruthenia as an autonomous state and appointment of Andrew Brody, a deputy in the Czechoslovak Parliament as prime minister of Ruthenia. Brody promptly declared martial law for the city of Mukacevo and ordered citizens to deliver weapons to the authorities.

Rejection of a British plan to permit Sudeten German refugees to remain two months in Czechoslovakia pending organization of international aid for them. Czechoslovakia feared new agitation if great numbers of Germans were taken into the republic, although most of the fugitives were anti-Nazi.

Czech-German Parley

Berlin, Oct. 12 (AP).—Informed quarters tonight regarded the visit of Czechoslovakia's new foreign minister, Frantisek Chvalkovsky, as an opening wedge toward aligning Czechoslovak foreign policy with Germany's and the Rome-Berlin axis. Chvalkovsky is scheduled to confer with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop tomorrow.

It was taken for granted the Germans would insist on severance of the Soviet-Czechoslovak mutual assistance pact.

Tomorrow's talk appeared to be in line with what a government spokesman said was Germany's desire for immediate direct negotiations—outside the International Sudeten Commission—to facilitate resumption of normal relations.

Russia Building A 'Maginot Line' Along Ukraine

By the Associated Press.

Reliable reports that the Soviet Union is hastening construction of a vast artificial no-man's land along its western frontier as a first line of defense against Germany have reached diplomatic circles here.

The information is that the Soviets, seeing the collapse of their efforts to forge an international barricade eastward around Germany, have dropped virtually everything else in order to protect the Ukranian wheat and coal fields from invasion.

A 6-point program is said to include deforestation and depopulation of the zone, destruction or mining of transportation arteries, construction of a formidable "Maginot line" along the eastern boundary of this quarantine belt, speeding up of railroad and highway building to facilitate transfer of supplies and troops, and development back of this area of big military concentration centers, together with well-fortified and provisioned air bases.

Palestine

Jewish leaders at 10 a. m. today, who will urge that Great Britain avoid any change of its Palestine policy which would close the door to homeless and oppressed Jews.

As the leaders assembled yesterday they announced that William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, had sent a cablegram to Sir Walter Citrine, head of the British Trade Unions, urging him to oppose a reported impending decision of the British government to stop Jewish immigration to Palestine.

Dr. Solomon Goldman, president, Zionist Organizations of America will speak at 7:45 o'clock tonight from WMAL on the necessity of permitting the immigration.

The emergency committee on Palestine, representing all leading Jewish organizations in the country, yesterday also made public the fact that Secretary of State Hull had been urged by the Union of Orthodox Rabbis to use his influence in the matter.

The delegation will include Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress; Henry Monsky, president, B'nai B'rith; Dr. Goldman, Louis Lipsky, chairman, Palestine Foundation fund; Rabbi B. L. Levinthal, dean of American orthodox rabbis; Mrs. Judith Epstein, president, Hadassah; E. I. Kaufman, chairman, Washington emergency committee; Louis Ginzburg, Jewish Theological Seminary; Samuel A. Goldsmith, chairman, Illinois emergency committee; Dr. Harry Friedenwald, Robert Szold, Palestine Economic Corporation; Dr. Abba H. Silver; Dr. Israel Goldstein, president, Jewish national fund, and Morris Margulis, secretary, Zionist Congregation of America.

Jewish Issue Delayed

The State Department has been informed that Great Britain will make no decision with respect to closing Palestine to Jewish immigration until after November 1, Secretary Hull indicated today as thousands of telegrams urging intercession of this Government poured in from all parts of the country.

Whether the modifications in the Palestine mandate the British government is considering would be such as would require consultation with the United States, as provided in the British-American convention of 1925, was a question Hull said he was not prepared to discuss. He assured, however, that this Government was giving attention to all phases of the question.

Tupelo, Miss., Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Vadie Dulaney, 17, at breakfast today told her parents she did not like her school teacher. A few minutes later, as the community bus arrived to take her from her home to high school, Vadie slipped her father's shotgun into her room and killed herself.

Gulf Storm Threatens

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 12 (AP).—The Weather Bureau today ordered northeast storm warnings hoisted from Carabelle, Fla., to Port Arthur, Tex., as a disturbance of "moderate intensity" was reported forming in the Gulf of Mexico 290 miles south of New Orleans.

Tarred and Feathered Pastor Charges In-Laws

Marietta, Ohio, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—The Rev. Joseph A. Dixon and his bride of 48 hours vowed tonight that they will press kidnaping charges against her ten relatives and friends who assertedly abducted and tarred and feathered him on his wedding night.

With nine of the ten persons accused of kidnaping free under $1,000 bond each awaiting grand jury action, Dixon, 42-year-old Nazarene evangelist, defied the protests of his bride's family.

Mrs. Dixon, the 22-year-old former Opal Hasley, daughter of a farmer, nodded her agreement.

China

Hankow offensive, he said, "now will be increased in intensity."

The population of northeast Kwangtung Province, above Bias Bay, was fleeing in fear the area soon would be engulfed by war, the spokesman added.

Japanese naval authorities reported further progress along the 80-mile stretch of the Yangtze between Kichun and Hankow to the northwest. Land and naval forces tightened their grip on Yangsin.

From Yangsin, southeast of Hankow, to Sinyang, on the Peiping-Hankow Railway to the north, the Japanese front was a semicircle being slowly closed on Hankow.

Chinese Resist

Hongkong (Thursday), Oct. 13 (AP). Chinese regulars, assisted by well-trained militia, were putting up a scattered but fairly effective resistance today against the Japanese expeditionary force which landed at Bias Bay yesterday for a campaign against Canton, in south China.

The Japanese, estimated to number 35,000, had started one drive northwest through a valley skirting the highway to Waichow, 80 miles east of Canton and the garrison city nearest Bias Bay.

Another column was striking south of Waichow and westerly toward the railroad connecting Canton and Kowloon, at Hongkong, the British crown colony.

Chinese reports said the Japanese landing yesterday was effected with far greater resistance than was first believed.

Japanese landing parties were repulsed repeatedly, it was declared, before the concentrated use of bombing planes overwhelmed resistance.

British Give Warning

Hongkong (Thursday), Oct. 13 (U.P.). There was no indication here today that the Japanese would heed a warning delivered the Tokyo government by British Ambassador Sir Alexander L. Craigie, who warned Japanese Premier Prince Konoye that Anglo-Japanese relations might be imperiled by the Japanese invasion of South China.

Craigie reminded Konoye of Britain's vast economic and political interests in South China and pointed to the danger of "incidents" if the Japanese attack in force in areas where Britain has so many nationals and so much property.

France was expected to make similar representations because of her interests in southeast China and the threat to her great Indo-Chinese colony.

An exchange telegraph dispatch to London said Hongkong police reserves had been mobilized because fighting between Japanese and Chinese was approaching the border of the British Crown Colony.

Thousands of Chinese civilians were fleeing the war zone into this British crown colony and its adjacent Kowloon leased territory on the mainland and British soldiers were aiding police in an attempt to preserve order.

The depot and repair ship Medway, a vessel of 15,000 tons, reached Hongkong yesterday from Singapore with the East Surrey Regiment to reinforce the British garrison here.

The colony already is swarming with refugees who fled here from Canton because of repeated Japanese aerial bombings of the metropolis in which thousands of Chinese have been killed or wounded.

In the Hankow area the Japanese had redoubled their offensive and hoped to take the provisional Chinese capital within three weeks.

The Japanese anticipated that Cantonese divisions, which are among the best defending Hankow, would be called back to South China to defend Canton.

Tokyo Warns Powers

Tokyo, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Japanese government today urged the United States and other powers to "refrain as far as possible from moving troops, warships and aircraft in South China" in view of the landing of a Japanese expedition, presumably for a drive on Canton.

Tokyo embassies of the principal powers were asked for co-operation to prevent incidents in connection with the South China campaign.

(A Hongkong dispatch said that the United States gunboat Mindanao, had arrived at Hongkong to provision and would return to Canton shortly. Presumably such movements come within the scope of the Japanese warning.)

To Install Zionist Head

Rabbi Isadore Breslau will be installed as president of the Washington Zionist District for the third consecutive year tonight at 8:30 o'clock at annual installation of officers and Succoth celebration at the Hebrew Home for the Aged.

Pupil Tattooed On Dead Eye, Doctors Told

Gold Chloride Used Turns Natural Black 'Window' Operation

The ancient art of tattooing in the new role of doctor's assistant was demonstrated to members of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolarynology yesterday by Dr Ramon Castroviejo, New York surgeon, who showed how gold chloride could be tattooed into an opaque eyeball to form a pupil.

Like the old art, the new one is for cosmetic purposes. The gold chloride turns black and the person, who would otherwise be disfigured by a sightless eye that also is unsightly, is thereby given a cornea of natural appearance.

Dr. Castroviejo also explained, by way of movies, the celebrated corneal window operation by which he has restored sight to "hopelessly" blind persons by the cutting of a clear window from one eye and grafting it in place of a central scar which covers the pupil of another.

Possibly 10,000 persons in the United States could be benefited by this operation, he declared, if there were enough healthy human eyes available for grafting purposes. Contrary to current stories, he said, animal eyes cannot be used in the operation and due to legal obstacles and eyes cannot be removed from dead persons without permission granted in wills. He urged that more people will their eyes to hospitals for this purpose.

Movie Is Shown

Cataract removals, the treatment of squints, and the plastic repair of drooping lids associated with spasm of the jaw muscles were demonstrated in movies shown by Dr. R. K. Daily, of Houston; Dr. Anderson C. Hilding, of Duluth; Dr. Frank Barber, of Rochester, and Dr. Desmond Curran, of Kansas City.

While the "eye" movies were being shown, the nose specialists were holding a panel discussion on the hardy American perennial of sinusitis.

Dr. Duncan MacPherson, of New York, in summing up the papers, declared he often feels Americans have developed the "sinus complex." Perhaps they have become too conscious of their sinuses, he said.

"The 'yes, but' man is a good man to have in medicine. He doesn't operate too quickly. We are hoping now that nature will help us do more about sinus. A general toning up of the body and climatic factors are becoming better recognized as essentials," he said.

Dr. MacPherson pointed out that Americans are leading the world in medical research and have been for five or six years. Both he and Dr. Ernest M. Seydell, of Wichita, attributed this to the growth of socialized medicine in Europe.

"Overdone Specialization"

"Only with private initiative can research continue. State medicine saps the initiative for private research," Dr. Seydell said.

All general practitioners cannot become specialists, Dr. MacPherson said, and so the specialist should make an effort to become more of a general practitioner.

"I think we have overdone specialization. I don't care how much money a man has, he doesn't like to be shifted around among so many doctors. I think its bad for the whole profession that he has to be," he said.

Gipsy Smith, Here to Preach At 78, Finds Sin Is Still Sin

Psychology? 'Tommyrot' 'It Started in a Garden' His Wife, 26, Is Along

RODNEY (GYPSY) SMITH

Sin is sin and there's no need trying to call it a psychological neurosis, Rodney (Gipsy) Smith, 78-year-old evangelist, declared yesterday as he completed plans for the two-weeks revival he will begin October 23 at the First Congregational Church to prove that neither he nor the Gospel has changed.

"I say tommyrot to psychology this and psychology that. Man has not changed and his need is still the same. He needs to be cleaned up.

"And by that I don't mean dressed in a clean suit of clothes and put in new surroundings. I mean he needs to be changed at heart. Sin did not start in the slums. It started in a garden, the best one ever planned," he said.

The evangelist who has conducted revivals all over the world and is credited with preaching to more people than any other one man, has not preached in Washington since the World War—when he was here on loan from the British government to help with Liberty Bond sales and lectured more than he preached.

"I've been preaching for 60 years and I'm as good today as I ever was. I can even sing as well. I can preach three sermons on Sunday and end up with a solo," he declared.

"I think it's my gipsy voice that has won me the most friends. My name has also helped. I was born in a gipsy tent, you know, and am a full-blooded gipsy. But I couldn't keep my friends," he added, "if I didn't have more than a glamorous name and a gipsy voice. I have a message that reaches men's hearts and that is what keeps my audiences big."

He expressed concern lest the Congregational Church, which holds 1,500 persons, should fail to hold his crowds. "We can put 400 more in the rooms that can be wired for sound, but that is not the same. People like to see the preacher.

"Not that I perform any antics, mind you. I just preach," he said.

His 26-year-old wife is with him and will assist in the revival here.

Crippled Child Special Case, Says Teacher

Held Often Maladjusted May Become 'Problem' Needs Separate Training

By Gerald G. Gross

(Fifth in a series of articles on the lack of educational opportunities for physically handicapped children in the District.)

"The successful physical restoration of a crippled child is dependent to a great degree upon adequate educaitonal, social and vocational services together with a more wholesome psychological attitude toward the handicapped child," says Mrs. Beulah Jones Drake, principal of Langdon School, who has devoted her career to education of invalid children.

"The success of the whole program in Washington is dependent upon more knowledge of existing conditions, together with a more sympathetic understanding and cooperation between those individuals and agencies, both public and private, working in the field."

Compiled Invalids Register

In contrast with the monumental indifference which has been shown generally to the problem of educating Washington's disabled children, Mrs. Drake has labored consistently for improved facilities.

Single-handed she compiled a crippled children's register for the District which served as a guide to the children's bureau during preparation of the social security project now under way at Gallinger Hospital.

She knows the disabled child not in the abstract but as a human being named Joe or Mary. To illustrate her deep conviction that the crippled are every bit as educable as the well she tells the story of Gertrude.

Gertrude has been crippled from childhood. Her condition was such, however, that she was able to attend public school through the fourth grade. At that point she was held by school officials to be physically unfit for admission to the fifth grade.

For a year and a half Gertrude remained home, wondering why suddenly she had been cut off from teacher, school chums and daily lessons.

Then, in 1929, Weightman School was opened for children like her. She enrolled. Her marks were among the highest during her steady march up through the grades. She was graduated, entered high school.

Not long ago Gertrude received her high school diploma with enviable academic honors. Today she is an accountancy student. Mrs. Drake has every confidence she will make good. But, suppose there had been no Weightman School.

The principal of Langdon School, to which the Weightman classes were transferred a year ago, often has to struggle desperately to get one of her graduates into high school.

Desires Special School

She wishes she didn't have to send them out, that Washington had a school for the handicapped that would take the child right through high school and give him vocational training besides. That goal is still no more than a dream.

Langdon school today has an enrollment of 42 boys and girls, from the first grade to the ninth. At Anthony Bowen, the corresponding school for colored pupils, the census is 36.

Mrs. Langdon had that pathetically small total in mind when she wrote, in reporting on her crippled children's survey:

"While Washington is providing special equipment for this small group, there are many children scattered in the various elementary, junior and senior high schools who should have this service.

"This is evidenced by the fact that there are more than 1,100 crippled children up to 21 years of age in this city, and of this figure it is reasonable to suppose that there are at least 300 who should be in a school designed to meet their needs.

This is, indeed, a very conservative estimate when many cities claim that 40 per cent of their crippled children need special education. A child who strives to survive in a school unsuited to his needs builds up a sense of inferiority and failure, to be followed by discouragement of resentment.

Creates "Problem" Child

"This brings the so-called problem child into being. These children need likewise intelligent guidance to overcome the effects of overindulgence or the slights of people with whom they come in contact.

"In many instances it would be better to keep the children in the orthopedic school until a complete mental and social adjustment has been made, but because of crowded conditions and lack of adequate facilities, these children are often returned to the regular grades when it is thought that a maximum physical improvement has been made.

"Washington is cognizant of its responsibility, but still there is much work to be done, and the program will not be complete until every crippled child in the city is having opportunities equal to those of the physically normal child."

(Tomorrow: Mrs. Drake's recommendations for a complete program.)

WPA Project Drafted

A committee of three was appointed yesterday to draft a WPA project for education of physically handicapped children now being kept out of school, but actual launching of the program remained in doubt last night.

The Works Progress Administration, which terminated a similar project here in March, 1937, again may hold that schooling of crippled as well as healthy children is a responsibility of the District, not of WPA.

Pending a ruling, however, the committee formed yesterday, headed by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, will attempt to work out an educational program covering not only the crippled but also children suffering from heart disease and other chronic afflictions.

Other members of the committee are Ross Haworth, assistant administrator of the District WPA, and Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer.

Whether the proposed program, financed by relief funds, would provide for visiting teachers or establishment of a "school" in the new orthopedic ward of Gallinger Hospital, or both, is up to the committee for decision.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, in whose office the conference was held, strongly recommended the visiting teacher plan. Such instructors, she pointed out, could be sent to the children's clinics as well as into the home.

Pope, in Greeting to Catholic U., Laments Rise of Dictatorships

Pontiff Hails University On Jubilee

Catholic

told of the action taken by the hierarchy with respect to the Holy Father's message, and his vigorous words and the hearty response to them indicated the importance attached to it. He said:

"The hierarchy has resolved to accept the plea of the Holy Father not with mere words of gratitude but with a practical application of the action that he has emphasized. They have commissioned the university to enter at once upon the preparation of suitable courses in civics and sociology which will be applied to the Catholic educational system of this country.

"These courses, which have as their basis a series of graduated textbooks suited to the advancing years of the pupils from elementary grades to maturity, will impart to Catholic students a precise definition of democracy, in the light of Catholic truth and tradition, and define the rights of and duties of the citizen in a representative republic. The university enters at once into the work necessary to carry out this plan."

The goal, Mgr. Corrigan said, would be to rear a citizenship, "loyal alike to God and government."

"This Catholic University of America," he said, "dedicates itself to such loyal obedience to the commission of the august Pontiff that Catholics in this country, trained from childhood in the supreme concept of constituted authority and of manhood's rights, shall never be spineless and lethargic while Godless men, mouthing much about democracy, do the work of traitors in this republic.

"We hold suspect of treason the Godless man, and aggressively maintain the Catholic American whose obedience to lawful authority is founded on obedience to God is the patriot this country needs today. Pope Pius XI has put in our hands a glorious contribution to the future peace and prosperity of our beloved America."

Yesterday's convocation, formally opening the golden jubilee celebration, was held in Catholic University's huge gymnasium. On the stage were Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop Cicognani, and some 75 American archbishops and bishops. In their midst, occupying a seat of honor, was the Rev. Dr. Henri Hyvernat, a white-haired scholar of 80, the only survivor of the teaching staff that opened Catholic University 49 years ago. For him it was an occasion doubly notable, for it was announced during the convocation that Pope Pius had made him a monsignor.

Cardinal Daugherty, the only one of America's three wearers of the red hat who was able to attend, offered the invocation, and then Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of the university, proclaimed the year of jubilee. This role had been assigned to the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university, but illness prevented his attendance.

Message "Inspiring"

The reading of the Pope's letter by Archbishop Cicognani was followed by the address of Msgr. Corrigan, who described the Pontiff's communication as an "inspiring message." He continued:

"No one who adheres at all to the principles of Christianity can hearken to the words we have heard of the venerable and world-beloved Holy Father—the outstanding moral here of the day and age—and remain entirely unmoved. No heart attuned to the true spirit of Christian brotherhood can resist his poignant appeal for a thorough religious and educational training in the principles of civil government and christian society.

"If his words are heeded and given effect, millions of minds will be entrenched in a high and unassailable loyalty, millions of characters, shaped and moulded into a patriotism of enduring ruggedness and virtue. The Catholic University of America pledges itself to this great task which the Holy Father declares dear to him.

"The enemies of God and of right government have known well how to center their efforts and their hopes on the youth of the Nation. Shall we be less wise? To train a generation in true Christian democracy means that the elementary school room must begin the task. It must be carried through secondary schools and keep pace with the developing mind of the future citizen.

"The Catholics of America may well thrill with pride at the message of the Holy Father. His insistence on the necessity of civic education must be heeded if the Catholic youth is to be formed into Catholic citizens capable and courageous, forming across the Nation a bulwark against seditious assaults upon legitimate authority and still not deprived one whit of their rights of protest against governmental abuses.

"By repeated admonition and through numerous encyclicals, Pius XI has endeavored to impress upon the world—as have his four illustrious predecessors—that the anguish through which the world is passing is primarily moral and religious in its origin and must look mainly for its solution to the moral law and to religious pronouncements.

Sees Mankind on Trial

"Governments of human devising are subject to human frailties, and when they are deprived of God's grace, are prone to error or excess. The degree of their immunity from distress and disaster is in proportion to the extent to which both the people and the administrative authorities are faithful to those Christian principles through which alone they can attain their nation's destiny.

"It is man's everyday treatment of man which is now on trial, and the very justice and wisdom of God's laws for all men and all governments, which are being challenged or being most cruelly assailed. With great profit to the soul and the body of the Nation, always exercising prudence and caution and abiding charity toward all men, the Catholic schools of America will be privileged in the great task with which the hierarchy has charged this university—to guide the minds of Catholic children toward those eternal verities which must be operative both in the material and in the spiritual spheres of life, if God's will is to be accomplished upon earth.

"Catholic education will be treading here on new ground, and intruding upon no forbidden or unfamiliar fields of thought or specialization. The eternal verities are, indeed, what the sublime phrase implies—the laws of God and of eternal justice, lived and expressed in the passion and death of Jesus Christ, and instantly and immediately applicable to the problems of life and time as well as of life everlasting.

"There has long been, and there still is, a world-wide tendency to divide and render antagonistic the civil and religious categories of life. They cannot be divorced without hurt to the citizen and to the State. We cannot divide the citizenship of heaven from the citizenship of earth. It is the compulsion which rests upon the citizen and is in the very conception of man's relationship to God and to society which is the very antithesis of secular and utilitarian interpretation which today so largely rules the world.

"There is the urgent and constant necessity for man to remember that although he seems to be serving two masters, he is in very truth serving only one.

"Accepting the August mandate of the Holy Father, and heeding his insistence on sociology, the Catholic University of America consecrates herewith its best efforts to bring his noble admonition in practical ways to the Catholic schools of America. It shall be our endeavor to make the spiritual and the temporal one beautiful composite whole, by rearing a citizenship loyal alike to God and government."

The four-day convention, attended by more than 1,800 delegates from throughout the United States, ended tonight with a banquet. Speakers on the program included Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, and United States Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming.

The conference will hold its 1939 convention in Denver and its 1940 convention in Chicago.

Mgr. O'Dwyer, the retiring president, said today that liberalization of the old-age insurance provisions of the social security act to make payments due in 1940 instead of 1942 would be the best answer to "utopian schemes" for dealing with the old-age assistance.

Catholic charitable and welfare agencies, he said, would spend approximately $20,000,000, exclusive of operation of hospitals, during the coming year. This figure represents an appreciable increase over last year's expenditures, he said, explaining that at least 10 diocesan agencies would be formed during the year to augment the 70 now in existence.

The Right Rev. Mgr. John O'Grady, of Washington, D. C., and Thomas F. Farrell, of New York, were re-elected executive secretary and treasurer, respectively, at today's business session.

Vice presidents named were John Dower of Denver, the Rev. Robert P. Barry of Boston, Edward Jones of San Francisco, Miss Florence Mason of Cleveland, and Mrs. George O'Connor, of Washington, D. C.

Paying The Piper

The ultimate upshot of the Munich accord remains on the laps of the gods. For the present Europe and the world are enjoying a breathing spell. But whether, and for how long, that will endure is far from certain.

In view of this situation it is hardly surprising that no great power is showing any disposition to carry out any unilateral reduction in armaments. On the contrary, all of them are going right ahead with their rearmament programs. There is no reason why the United States should lag behind. There is every reason, on the contrary, why we should continue to build up our defenses.

With the destruction of the post-war system in Europe our position, like that of many other nations, has become more insecure. We shall have to pay the price of that increased insecurity while clinging to the hope that at some time in the future, be it hoped not too far distant, a general resettlement will provide a reliable basis for the reduction of armaments.

The first payment of that price is soon to be made. At his press conference on Tuesday President Roosevelt made it clear that naval expenditures for the coming fiscal year will have to be increased by $150,000,000 over those for the current year.

This sum will actually be needed not for the execution of any new projects but for the carrying out of naval building plans already approved by Congress. Yet it would be dangerously optimistic to assume that the next Congress will not have to authorize still further expansion in the American fleet, as well as in the air forces and Army. Isolation, now as heretofore, is a highly expensive luxury.

Loe, The Poor Strachey

Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey is a perfect specimen of the faintly amusing type which is accurately classified as "parlor bolshevik." There is no trace of the proletarian in his Eton and Oxford accent. His numerous books, for all their polished style and engaging reasoning, will never excite the horny-handed sons of toil. And while Mr. Strachey can handle a dish of bonbons with a distinct flair it is doubtful that he would recognize a bomb if he met one on the lecture platform. There he is generally found, when not in his study or playing cricket, one of his favorite recreations.

The purported communism of Evelyn John St. Loe, in other words, is slightly ridiculous. It serves no deadlier purpose than mildly to titivate the emotions of those members of women's clubs who are his most assiduous listeners. Its stimulus is as evanescent as that of a cocktail and certainly no more injurious. To dignfy Mr. Strachey's cultured utterances as a threat to American institutions is about as gross an exaggeration of the gentleman's importance as can be imagined.

So the Department of State is placed in a very foolish position by its decision to incarcerate Mr. Strachey at Ellis Island, pending deportation. The position is not strengthened by the original granting and subsequent denial of his visitor's visa. It isn't bad business for Mr. Strachey, whose royalties will probably show a slight but perceptible rise as a result of the advertising. But from the viewpoint of the United States Government it is unutterably silly.

The incident, however, may serve some constructive purpose if it results in re-examination of our immigration laws. In a phraseology which may have been reasonable 50 years ago these prohibit the entry of those who are opposed to organized government, or who advocate the assassination of public officials. The law, in short, was designed primarily to exclude terrorists and anarchists.

Nowadays the theory of anarchy is most loudly voiced in the upper-income brackets. And the Communists, as fervent supporters of the totalitarian state, are as fervent in their support of strongly centralized government as economic royalists are critical of its expanding authority. In the same camp as the Communists are the Nazis and Fascists, who glorify the complete supremacy of the state in much the same way as do their opposite numbers of the Red persuasion.

If the purpose of the immigration law is to keep out anarchists, then there is no reason for excluding the Communists who are their bitter enemies. And if the purpose of the law is to ban Communists, then it should logically be extended to deny the privilege of entry to Nazis and Fascists. The left and right extremes meet in their loyalty to ruthless dictatorship and each is as much an enemy of American institutions as the other.

Much water has gone under the bridge of social theory since the present prohibitions against entry of undesirable immigrants were drafted. It is high time to revise these prohibitions into some sort of logical pattern. Until that is done their chief service will be to penalize harmless chappies like Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey, and to admit really efficient agitators, like Harry Bridges or those well-known Fascist agents who do their stuff in forums more effective for disturbance than are women's clubs.

Mr. O'Mahoney's Aim

Senator O'Mahoney's address before the New York Board of Trade is the clearest exposition so far given of the character and the objectives of the investigation entrusted to the Temporary National Economic Committee, generally referred to as the monopoly committee. A mistaken belief that the committee was organized primarily for the purpose of conducting a punitive campaign against monopolistic practices is undoubtedly traceable to this misleading popular designation. Consequently, at the beginning of his address, Senator O'Mahoney made it plain that his committee is approaching its task with an open mind, and with much broader aims than the discovery and prosecution of monopolistic abuses.

However, Senator O'Mahoney takes a firm stand in indorsing President Roosevelt's opinion that "the power of a few to manage the economic life of the Nation must be diffused among the many or be transferred to the public and its democratically responsible Government." If we must choose between an economy controlled by irresponsible private groups and a publicly planned economy, the latter seems preferable. But it is for the committee of inquiry to determine whether that choice has to be made.

Senator O'Mahoney hopes that the committee will suceed in finding a formula "which in the basic industries, at least, will eliminate the evils of destructive competition while securing an adjustment that may be expected to stabilize employment and mass purchasing power." This is an exceedingly ambitious undertaking, but it presents a challenge that the American people ought to be prepared to face without flinching.

Privately managed monopolies, or concerns so large as to dominate an industry, certainly cannot be permitted to operate without legislative restrictions. On the other hand, it is not in the public interest to foster the sort of competition which destroys efficiency. And under our existing system much so-called competition is of the destructive type. Hence a way must be fund to eliminate competitive abuses without substituting monopolistic practices not in the public interest. Otherwise, increasing control over private business will inevitably devolve upon political agencies.

Senator O'Mahoney is convinced that the responsibility for finding a solution of the dilemma rests upon the Federal Government. Yet he also believes that "the concentration of economic power and wealth in Government can be just as bad, if not worse than, if concentrated in a large corporation." What he is obviously seeking to find is a middle way that will leave room for the free play of individual initiative within the framework of our present governmental system.

The experts assembling material for the committee which Senator O'Mahoney heads, and the witnesses invited to present testimony for all interested classes in the community, will be co-operating in the solution of major problems of pressing importance. Even if the outcome of the study and discussion should prove to be inconclusive, the investigation is certain to yield valuable material for guidance in the framing of future regulatory legislation. It is especially fortunate that the committee's chairman is so keenly aware of the larger social and political issues involved in the narrower economic inquiry that is the immediate object of study.

Books For China

One of the lesser known, but surely not the least, of the calamities inflicted upon China by Japan's repeated air raids has been the destruction of Chinese university libraries. So many great collections of books have been ruined or depleted by bombings that 35 Chinese colleges and universities have now joined in an appeal to the American Library Association for gifts of books from this country.

The association's international relations committee has transmitted this appeal to the American people. It has enlisted the aid of an honorary committee which includes, among other distinguished names, those of President Hutchens, of the University of Chicago; Prof. Robert Millikan, of the University of California, and Bishop Freeman, of Washington. A campaign has already been launched and will continue until the end of the year. The International Exchange Service of the Smithsonian Institution will serve as the forwarding agency.

Most urgently needed, according to advices from China, are books and other publications in the fields of science, technology, medicine, literature and general reference. This list of subjects is eloquent. It appears to mean that in the midst of one of the most barbarous wars of history, Chinese teachers and students can hold to the values of civilization and peace.

It is difficult to see how such an appeal can be resisted by any one in a position to answer it.

A Study In Contrasts

The officials of the Civil Service Commission should take prompt action to reform their methods of receiving applications for new jobs in the Government service. Yesterday's disorders, attendant upon the distribution of blanks to those seeking positions as charwomen, reflect seriously upon the short-sightedness of the Federal authorities. It seems strange that the Civil Service Commission has not long since provided for some more orderly and regular plan of registration that would enable the Government to make better selections and protect those in search of work from the hardships of the present haphazard procedure.

This mass-application method of filling Federal jobs is in striking contrast with the system which has developed in the District for placing idle workers in private employment.

The District Employment Center now has on its lists of registered unemployed about 48,000 names. These applicants for work are interviewed, classified, listed in card indexes and placed as soon as possible in positions which they appear qualified to fill. The public employment agency has expanded its office facilities and added to its staff. Of course, the compulsory registration of the jobless as a condition of receiving unemployment benefits accounts chiefly for the recent great increase in the work of the center. As a result, knowledge of its existence and of the services it is ready to perform has spread among the workers of the District.

It is the ambition of the organization to become a central clearing house to which employers will turn more and more in the assurance that they will be able to obtain better-qualified men and women than they could otherwise secure. At present Director Lamson estimates that only 30 per cent of the local employers use the service.

To bring the value of its facilities to the attention of the other 70 per cent, the District Commissioners have issued a proclamation announcing that next week will be employment week. That has afforded an opportunity for giving greater publicity to the work of the Employment Center. Heretofore personal visits to employers have been relied upon to enlist their support.

With the District agency's example to guide them, surely the Civil Service commissioners will not repeat the mistakes that produced the distressing and potentially dangerous scenes enacted yesterday.

Glory For All

The long and sometimes quite bitter controversy about who is entitled to be called the discoverer of the New World now seems to be settled on a basis so reasonable as to satisfy all concerned.

Thor Thors, Icelandic commissioner to the New York World's Fair, gives the title to an Irishman. Mr. Thors, to be sure, does not name the Irishman, probably because at the time of the discovery nobody thought to make a note of it. Anyhow, we can be reasonably sure that it was neither Pat nor Mike and that he was the leader of a band of Gaelic argonauts who crossed the Atlantic to Iceland at some date prior to A. D. 795.

The theory that it was the Irish who discovered the New World is, of course, nothing new. It is based on certain references in the writings of certain ancient Irish monks. There has even been an effort to identify the genial Central American deity, Quetzacoatl, lately adopted as the official Mexican Santa Claus, with one of those wide wandering Irish missionaries of the sixth century. However this may be, Mr. Thors, who seems to know what he is talking about, insists that all scholars now accept the account of the Irish discovery and settlement of Iceland as written in France by one Duicil, a monk, in A. D. 825. This was a quarter century before the first Scandinavians arrived in Iceland.

The more you think about it, the more admirable Mr. Thors' solution of the question seems. It is the kind of thing so badly needed in present-day diplomacy. The Irishman gets the glory of being first to cross the Atlantic, at least to Iceland, but Leif Eriksson keeps, for the present anyhow, the glory of having been the first white man to set foot on the North American continent. As for Columbus, whose exploit we celebrated yesterday, he is left with the glory of being the only one of the three whose discovery cut any very important quantity of historical ice.

A scientist dug up in Venezuela several human skulls which had no foreheads. There's no telling how long this world has been infested with politicians.

Letters to the Editor

"Do We Still Mean It?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently you printed a splendid and timely appeal for the Czech victims of the Munich deal. We support it and urge you to follow up with more, for the need will be tremendous.

But isn't there any end to this refugee business? . . . Refugees from Italy after the industrialists handed over the government to Mussolini in 1923, refugees from the Spanish Basque country in 1937 after Mussolini and Hitler joined forces, refugees from Austria last spring, and now more refugees from Czechoslovakia. Today we hear that the Big Four will next consider the problem of how to carve up Spain.

Must we forever be taking up collections to relieve suffering and never do anything to prevent it? Here in Washington there are thousands and throughout the country there are millions more who have come to believe that all the "charity money" we can spare should be sent to strengthen the resistance of people who are under fascist attack.

Our organization, the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy, formed to mobilize this more realistic charity, is now engaged in raising its share of a $250,000 national campaign to send a cargo of food, clothing and medical supplies to Republican Spain. Our quota is $10,000.

Those Washingtonians who are indignant and dismayed at the yielding up of the Czechs to Hitler should respond with every cent they can spare for that other magnificent people in Spain. For these people, in spite of betrayal by their military and clerical leaders, despite the arms embargo applied against them by supposedly friendly powers, have for two years stood off the combined assault of the two great fascist powers.

One hundred and forty years before Mussolini and Hitler, when democracy was young in America, we defied another pirate power in the Mediterranean with the slogan "Millions for defense—Not one cent for tribute!" . . .

Book Is Readily Available

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post would do a service to thousands of misinformed people if it would print an outline of Hitler's "Mein Kampf." After all, it is a book of tremendous importance at this time of the world's history. The future expansion policy of Germany will be taken from it. Why let the people who read The Post guess about Hitler's next move in taking over the countries of Europe? Der Fuehrer has already conveniently outlined his plans in this fateful book. His dreams for a German Empire of 225 million people, I am sure, would astound the average man.

Hitler isn't merely guessing or groping in Europe; he is gradually but effectively following his plans which he formulated while serving a prison term. "Mein Kampf" will probably decide the possibilities of the next war. It has more power than all of the diplomats of Europe. Chamberlain, unknowingly or knowingly, had this book in his mind when he conceded one-fifth of Czechoslovakia to Germany.

In other words, this book outlines the future policies of Hitler in regard to the establishment of a great German empire which would rule the world. I think that almost anyone would be interested in knowing about such a book. Don't you?

Leniency At Versailles

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Pegler's article in The Post, October 5, on the Versailles Treaty's being too lenient is entirely correct. It is a most admirable presentation and shows how the victors erred on the side of leniency. When a mad dog is throttled, it is a very good plan to keep it throttled until a lethal dose can be administered. The fatal mistake was in not carving up the German empire when the carving was good.

Was a victorious Germany easy on France in 1870? Not at all—she was cruel and vindictive in the extreme, took two or three provinces from France, and imposed and collected an indemnity of approximately $1,000,000,000, which sum at that time would about equal to ten billions now. It was thought France could not pay, but it was literally squeezed out of her, and France has never quite recovered. Germany, on the other hand, neatly and completely evaded payment of reparations because she was not forced to pay as France had been. Instead of paying the allies' moderate claim, she used the money to re-arm. Had Germany been victorious in 1918, her fiendish malignity would have known no bounds. She had already boasted of how she was going to bleed England white.

Hitler has the unparalleled gall to speak of self-determination for Sudeteniand. Why not apply that principle to Germany—it is made up of a conglomeration of small nations and principalities acquired by force and held together by Prussian might. It is sickening to read of Hitler's triumphal entry into so many newly acquired territories, acquired not by force, but merely a show or threat of force.

Regional Governments

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of recent international events, isn't it high time that you editors stopped bragging about the "great democracies?"

The political chaos in the world today is merely the reflection of a plutocratic, international economic system which corrupts the people generally and lowers their mentality as well as their character, both individually and collectively. Yet you keep on defending a system which no doubt needs defenders but has no real defense.

The "two-party" system in this country has always been a detriment to the vast majority of the people. Both parties are capitalistic, and so the people in most States have only "Hobson's choice." Numerous State laws discriminate not only against individuals, but also against all minority parties, making it impossible for even political democracy to function. The two wings of the capitalistic party, Democratic and G. O. P., constitute but one party in fact, regardless of the theorizing that is advanced by confusionists

The G. O. P. fought a four-year war against States' rights; now it is a States' rights party. But this theory is also a delusion, since the States are not equal as to size, population or natural wealth. Some are so poor that only large Federal appropriations have thus far kept them from outright bankruptcy. But the corporations find they can fool or corrupt the State governments easier than they can the Federal Government. States' rights have been a joke ever since the days of the Articles of Confederation, previous to the adoption of the Constitution. This is not to mention the increased cost of our numerous State governments to the taxpayers.

What we should have, of course, are regional governments such as exist in Canada, Australia and the Soviet Union. New England would make a good economic state, and out West the present States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California would make an equally good economic sector. But our obsolete Constitution makes this impossible under the present set-up.

Spending And Taxation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: David Cushman Coyle informs us that when Government spending takes the form of conservation of human and natural resources "and is balanced by strong income taxation, it appears to be the most feasible method to measure a smooth-working, high-technology capitalism."

"Smooth-working" is good! Since when has taxation been rendered smooth? As a matter of fact our national tax structure is so "rough" and top-heavy it is destined to eventually topple, as did the Tower of Babel, unless stern measures are adopted to check an ever-mounting deficit.

Of course it will not require a Houdini to perceive that increased taxation of our industrial corporations simply means greatly decreased dividends to millions of American stockholders. It follows that the purchasing power of this multitude has been crippled and, in some instances, paralyzed; money that formerly poured into people's pockets is confiscated by the Government. Our great corporations have repeatedly reminded shareholders that a third to a half of profits are consumed by taxation. They operate against great odds. The national juggernaut will eventually crush both capital and labor unless taxes are trimmed.

Hasn't Cushman Coyle overlooked some very important and inescapable points in his latest address on "Investments and Government Spending?"

Life On $14 A Week

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not so many months ago I noticed one of your published letters which had been written by a cab driver, who, in an effort to bring about a repeal of the District insurance law, attempted to show how he could not live (and pay the insurance) on $37.50 a week.

I don't expect this letter to affect in any way the attitude of the leaders of this Nation on the wage-hour bill. Yet, perhaps someone, more experienced than I, might, after reading it, guide my steps aright.

I make the minimum wage of 25 cents an hour. This for a period of 56 hours amounts to $14. From this comes the following: $5 sent home, $4 for room rent, $1 for laundry, toilet articles and miscellaneous needs and 14 cents for tax. This leaves $3.86 for food, clothing and amusement. Should there be a holiday, as the Fourth of July or Labor Day, then $2.38 more must be deducted, leaving $1.48 for food, clothing and amusements. If I am cut to 40 hours a week and receive only $9.90, how could I possibly get by on that?

Most important, what could one do with those long hours of leisure, if one is without decent clothes or money? ANOTHER KING.
Washington, Sept. 29.

Concerning 'Guts'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All hail to the lady from Nottingham who says that Americans are a flock of cowardly busybodies—that they have no guts for war and should cut out their bellyache about the Czechs having been sold down the river. She says also that the States were hoping for a war that would improve business conditions and that in the not far distant future we will have to face the authoritarian coalition without assistance from any allies. All these things are true.

The only thing in which Mrs. Clay was incorrect was in her fancied detection of some guts in the possession of The Post. Where in Heaven's name did she get such an idea as that? P. H. R.

The Post Impressionist

"Ain't Got Rhythm"

THERE is a song going around now whose main catch phrase is "the loneliest man in town." I don't know what all the other words are, because I can never understand them over the radio, but the general idea is that if you can't have rhythm you will be highly unpopular and will never get asked to parties.

Now, I would suspect this song to be nothing but Arthur Murray propaganda were it not for my own experience. While, I suppose, some people like to be popular and to get around with the gayer set, I never cared much for such folderol. This was a fortunate circumstance, because I never did have rhythm.

My first experience with attempting to make the feet move in time to music came when I was packed off to dancing school, an institution which I had looked upon as distinctly sissy. I protested at devoting my Saturday afternoons to such a clearly fruitless enterprise, but the parental will was firm. So, finally, one autumn day, with my face scrubbed and my cowlick brushed down, I was led to the Masonic Hall for sacrifice.

After my mother had left me and had joined a group of her friends I saw a knot of boys I knew and we nervously exchanged quips until it was time for the ordeal to begin. We didn't deign to look at the girls, except to notice that they were arriving, too, most of them pulling self-consciously at their white cotton stockings.

Pivoting self-importantly in the center of the dance floor was the instructor, Mr. Snark. He was 79 years old and he bounced so agilely that the mothers on the sidelines used to say to each other, "My, isn't Mr. Snark spry for a man his years!" I didn't like him much, myself.

Pretty soon Old Snark and his assistant, a chubby, dowdy woman whose name I have forgotten and who is thus lost to posterity, got us all lined up. The boys were put in a thin rank on one side of the room, the girls on the other.

Fortunately, all I remember of the preliminary details is that you had to walk forward a few steps, sliding your feet and saying "One, two, one, two." Then you walked backward, a precarious business, saying the same thing. There was one boy whom nobody liked and we took turns tripping him.

Old Snark had been brought up and had lived most of his maturity in a day when square dancing was the thing. So that's what he emphasized most in his classes. I do not now recall many of the names and I never understood the mechanics of the square dance. There was the Virginia Reel, I know, and something else called the Paul Jones or John Jones; Jones anyway. The whole affair was pretty confusing to a boy whose reflexes were none too good and whose imagination could never quite encompass the intricacies of moving in and out and swinging your partner.

One by-product of the square dances I do recall vividly. That was the sharp, crackling electric spark that passed from your hand to that of your partner as you met once more after a shuffling circle around the hall alone. It made quite a lot of noise, that spark did. It hurt a little, too.

As a concession to the trend of the times, Old Snark completed his course with lessons in the waltz and fox trot. These dances, while comparatively simple to understand, had one serious drawback: You had to ask the girls to dance with you instead of having them assigned by chance.

We boys were at the age then when it was bad enough to have girls thrust on you; we certainly weren't going to seek them out. It didn't do us any good to hang back, though, because Old Snark's female assistant would spy out the laggards and lead them firmly across the floor to where the girls sat. There was nothing for it, then.

Out of these enforced bits of gallantry came an incident which, in the light of history, seems to have indicated the course of my whole social career. I was waltzing, or perhaps fox-trotting, and making heavy weather of it. I was bumping my partner's knees and walking on her feet at every step. I marveled that she did not cry out in pain.

But this girl was made of stern stuff. She even made an effort to be light-hearted and, maybe, just a little sophisticated.

"You know," she told me, "I must look a sight. I've just washed my hair and I can't do a thing with it."

"Have you?" I asked, placing my heel adroitly on her instep. "Well, I've just washed my feet."

The music ended then and I took the girl to a neutral corner. She sat there, glaring, proud and hurt and utterly perplexed.

The last time I danced—at a college prom—the girl, after a few minutes' trial insisted that we sit that one out.

"Listen," she said. "Do you know why you can't dance? You like to talk too much."

Wings Over Emigrants

THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S solicitude for the status of Americans in Italy under the recent Italian decrees restricting the rights of Jews prompts a question whether this Government should assume the same responsibility for naturalized Americans residing in foreign lands as for natives of this country.

The British government is cordial to political refugees and citizenship may be acquired under liberal conditions, but a British consul once explained to me that he was spared many of the problems confronting his American colleague in the same troubled foreign city because naturalized British subjects are generally required to find suitable places of abode and business somewhere within the wide range of the empire.

Great Britain, he said, was not providing credentials and the protection of the British fleet for naminal British subjects who would use the little blue passport merely to obtain special advantages in their native lands.

THE AMERICAN CONSUL, on the other hand, said that it was the naturalized American, returned to the old country, who caused most of his troubles with the local authorities. At the moment he was engaged in protecting the interests of a naturalized American who had sojourned in the United States long enough to qualify for citizenship and then had returned to his home country to go into business. Counting too much on his rights as an American citizen, the man had interfered in the politics of a country under a dictatorship and then had dumped his woes in the lap of the American consul.

There are naturalized Americans living and doing business in foreign countries under the protection of the American flag who are no more American than King George VI and speak a less plausible version of the American language.

JIMMY (VINCENT) SHEEAN, in "Person History," said that some of the American Jews in Palestine were orientalized, whatever that may mean, and said he had met a few who spoke no English at all.

The American passport is a powerful and valuable document for a foreigner, and it need not be doubted that some foreigners do acquire American citizenship with no intention to make this country their home or anything else but the goat for their troubles should they run foul of the political or police authorities in less liberal lands.

Naturalized Germans who had returned to Germany with no thought of participating in the life and responsibilities of their adopted country caused much troublesome duty for American consuls in the early days of the Hitler regime.

THE WORLD ALMANAC says there were 374,503 Americans living abroad on January 1, 1937, and makes no distinction between natives and naturalized citizens. However, it will be remembered that in the early days of the Spanish Civil War many queer fish swam into the American consulates to claim the rights and protection to which American citizens are entitled under our laws. They included borderline cases and technical Americans with only the written form of citizenship and no other interest in the country whose assistance they were demanding.

There was a case in Munich of a German who in the course of his travels had acquired American citizenship but in 15 years of residence in Germany had not even recorded his name at the consulate.

FALLING INTO TROUBLE with the Nazis, however, he wrapped himself in the Stars and Stripes and got away before the Germans thought of asking whether his American citizenship was still valid. It wasn't, for nowadays naturalized Americans living abroad are expected to visit the nearest consul at two-year intervals and convince them that they are not not merely foreigners claiming the rights of technical Americanism.

It would be unfair to forbid naturalized Americans to leave the United States at all, but it is equally foolish that aliens be allowed to glance off this country and forever after use the United States as their attorney and bodyguard. There are many naturalized Americans in foreign lands whose citizenship means just that to them and nothing more.

"Cheaper To Move"

When, some time ago, a humorous writer in one of the popular dailies suggested Britain's best policy would be to pack up and move out of Europe, he was dealing facetiously with an idea that has many serious adherents.

There is a school of thought in England which says that if Europe is going to be dominated by the totalitarian dictators, the British Isles ought no longer to be the heart of the great British empire.

They point out, do these advocates of the "great removal," that the center of Western civilization would shift from the Atlantic to the Pacific if Britain transferred its vital interests to its own great Dominion of Canada.

By such a move the British Empire and the United States would dominate the world, and European dictatorships would be utterly powerless.

The Emperor Constantine, some 1,600 years ago, deeming Rome too seriously menaced by barbarian encroachments, shifted the seat of government of the great Roman Empire to Byzantium (promptly renamed Constantinople)—with the result that, whereas Rome fell to the barbarians a century and a half later, the new Eastern Roman Empire, based on Constantine's new capital, kept aloft the torch of Roman power and culture another thousand years.

So—why wait for a crisis and then try to meet it with piecemeal measures? Why not, like Constantine, foresee it, forestall it, combat it with drastic measures, planned far ahead?

Roosevelt And Labor

By Mark Sullivan

Peace Talk Helps Candidates

THE PROPOSAL for uniting the two great labor groups—American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization—has been made intermittently during two or three years. The most recent activity about it originated with President Roosevelt. For his present interest there is timely reason.

The cleavage between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. works to the disadvantage of Mr. Roosevelt in the current elections. He, and candidates for office who reflect him, aim to get, and to a large extent have, what is called the labor vote. But A. F. of L. and C. I. O. are bitterly hostile toward each other. In many States, if a candidate is favored by C. I. O., he is for that very reason opposed by A. F. of L. And vice versa. Many candidates might win if the two groups are united, but may lose with them divided. Union achieved before the election, or even the talk about union that has been started, tends to help many New Deal candidates, for Congress, Governor and other offices.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is closely associated with C. I. O. The originator and present head of C. I. O. is Mr. John L. Lewis. When Mr. Lewis started C. I. O. he took into it, as its principal division, the United Mine Workers, of which Mr. Lewis had been head for many years. The United Mine Workers, through Mr. Lewis, was the largest contributors to President Roosevelt's campaign fund in 1936. The contribution amounted to nearly $500,000. Other contributions to other New Deal candidates in some States, especially Pennsylvania, brought the total to about $750,000.

When C. I. O. was being organized throughout the country, organizers, in soliciting memberships, used placards and circulars telling workers that "the President" wished them to join. The phrase "the President" could be interpreted as meaning the head of the C. I. O., Mr. Lewis. But it could also be interpreted as meaning the President of the United States. This use of the phrase "the President" was called to Mr. Roosevelt's attention but he took no public step about it.

WHEN C. I. O. STARTED its most successful strike, in the automobile industry in Michigan, it used, for the first time in America in an important way, the sit-down device. General Motors procured from a Flint, Mich., court, an order directing the sit-downers to leave the plant. The sheriff asked Gov. Murphy of Michigan for help to enforce the court's order. Gov. Murphy did not give the help. Instead, while the sit-downers continued to occupy the plant, he conducted a mediation in which the sit-downers won much that they had demanded. It was felt at the time that Gov. Murphy, who is close to President Roosevelt, must not have received any protest from the President.

Altogether, President Roosevelt is in a position in which C. I. O. is a political liability to him. To the extent that C. I. O. is eliminated by merger with A. F. of L., or even minimized by talk of such merger, to that extent C. I. O. as a liability to Mr. Roosevelt is reduced.

C. I. O. IS NOT popular with voters generally. Many voters regard C. I. O. as infected with Communism, and it is a fact that much of the leadership of some divisions of C. I. O. has the Communist philosophy. It is also a fact that the sit-down strike, which is practiced by C. I. O. and is new in American labor activity, is strongly disapproved by many voters.

Because of C. I. O.'s practice of the sit-down strike, and the color of communistic philosophy which some of its divisions have, many voters think of C. I. O., if it continues to exist and grow, as tending to destroy private ownership of businesses and industries. It is probably true that if the sit-down strike should become permently established in America as a technique of labor disputes, it would greatly weaken or completely destroy the right of individuals and corporations to own and operate businesses and industries. Seizing and holding possession of plants for the temporary purpose of a strike does not differ in principle from seizing them permanently, as was done when the Soviets took over all business and industry in Russia.

THIS VIEW about C. I. O. is held by A. F. of L. leaders. A high official of A. F. of L., Mr. John P. Frey, testifying before the Dies Congressional Investigating Committee, said: "The sit-down strike and mass picketing have been used by the Communists in our country as a training camp in which Communists can become familiar with the tactics they are to apply when their revolutionary program is put into action."

From this sort of thing, A. F. of L. is free. During the 60 years of A. F. of L.'s existence, industry as a privately owned institution has prospered and grown. No one has ever thought of the principle of private ownership as being threatened by A. F. of L.

From this it seems plain that in any union between A. F. of L. and C. I. O., the indispensable condition is abandonment of the sit-down strike and disavowal of the communist philosophy.

Ft. Meade Review Staged in Honor Of Gen. Kreuger

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Oct. 12 (AP).—Tanks and 2,200 soldiers stationed here passed in review today in honor of Brig. Gen. Walter Kreuger, assigned last month to command the sixteenth brigade with headquarters at the fort.

Led by Col. C. B. Elliott, commander of the post and the Thirty-fourth Infantry, the troops paraded around the Vesle Hill review field and dipped guidons in salute to Gen. Kreuger who last month, during maneuvers of the Third Corps Area commanded his officers to "get wet with the men" and sleep in pup tents in a rain-swept field. The general also pitched for himself.

Today And Tomorrow

The John Strachey Case

THE LEGAL AUTHORITY under which the State Department has acted in canceling the visa of Mr. John Strachey arises out of Presidential regulations made under an act of Congress passed between 1918 and 1922. On his previous visit in March, 1935, Mr. Strachey collided with a law enacted in its present form in 1920. The general intent and spirit of all the laws on this subject is substantially the same. And the most significant thing about these laws is that they belong to the period before communism had become a worldwide movement and before fascism had even been invented.

The title of the deportation act, for example, makes clear the theory of this whole body of legislation. It is "an act to exclude and expel from the United States aliens who are members of the anarchistic and similar classes," and Section 1(d) excludes from admission "aliens who write . . . teaching . . . opposition to all organized government or . . . the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all forms of law." Laws of this kind, in short, were enacted before the American democracy or any other had learned to appreciate the challenge of the totalitarian revolutionary movement. Though enacted at the end of the World War, they are based on the ideas and the experience of the pre-war world when it was felt that democracy needed only to be defended against "anarchistic and similar classes," that is to say, against secret conspiracy, terrorism, assassination, and sabotage.

THE LAWS ANTEDATE, and therefore, ignore the whole post-war phenomenon of the totalitarian revolution under which democratic institutions are used in order to destroy democracy. Because the laws no longer fit the real facts of the contemporary world, the attempt to apply them to the revolutionists of our time leads to all manner of confusion, sophistication, and legal contradiction. If Mr. Strachey, for example, is a Communist, he can maintain that far from opposing "all organized government," he advocates a regime in which the whole life and labor of the people is organized by government. If he is asked whether he teaches "the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States" he can reply that he advocates, at least in theory, the use of the ballot to obtain a Communist majority, and that only after he had lawfully obtained a majority, would he legally suppress the minority.

The statutes were enacted to deal with anarchists, with men who do not believe in the ballot and who are opposed to organized government. The statutes are being applied in a world where the revolutionists against democracy are totalitarians who use the ballot to create the most overwhelmingly powerful forms of government ever seen among men.

THERE IS NO DOUBT whatever that democracy is confronted with a problem today which was unheard of and undreamed of when these statutes were enacted. For not until the rise of communism and then of fascism had any one imagined that civil liberties and the democratic ballot could and would be used to destroy civil liberties and the democratic ballot. Only in the post-war period have we seen the appearance of revolutionary movements which claim all the rights of free men during their march to power and then exterminate all the rights of free men when they have attained power. Only in the past 20 years or so has it been demonstrated how effectively the principles of democracy can be exploited in order to destroy those principles.

In former times democrats have always believed that they could tolerate any agitation, short of open incitement to violence, because by counter-agitation and democratic methods they would always have the chance to repair the mischief. But in the post-war era this optimistic assumption has been disproved. It has been demonstrated that after a totalitarian victory the chance to repair the mischief disappears.

Thus totalitarian revolutionists operating within a democratic regime can lose any number of elections and yet they can always try again. But if the democracy loses one election, it can never try again. That being the case, democrats throughout the world have come to realize in the past ten years that an active and positive defense of democratic institutions is an absolute necessity.

THE EXTENT to which the more immediately threatened democracies of Europe have already begun to legislate on the subject is not perhaps fully appreciated here. Thus, for example, all the democratic states of Europe have in recent years enacted laws against private political armies, against political uniforms, and the carrying of symbols which represent semi-military, revolutionary organizations. Laws of this kind were passed in 1933-1934 by Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, the Netherlands, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Belgium, and by France and England in 1936. Many of these same nations have laws prohibiting private armies, party militias, bodyguards, and storm troopers. Military training by unauthorized persons is forbidden in Belgium, France, and Great Britain.

Laws have been enacted in Sweden, Norway, Finland, the Netherlands, and Great Britain making it a criminal offense to conduct propaganda which incites extreme hatred and thus leads to violence, and the right to meet and to parade, when used to provoke trouble, is now regulated in Great Britain.

Many countries have felt compelled to go even further and to restrict freedom of speech and freedom of the press when they are used to defame public authorities and to destroy the dignity of democratic institutions. In the Scandinavian countries, specially trained political police have been constituted.

LAWS OF THIS KIND mark a great departure from the older theories of democracy. But the fact that all the democracies of Europe have felt compelled to turn away from the older tolerance of all agitation is an impressive reminder of the degree to which democracy is on the defensive in the modern world.

Moreover, the problem has by no means been solved by this legislation and, in all probability, it is not entirely soluble by repressive laws alone. It is therefore a problem which democrats will have to study very carefully. It is a problem which ought to be made the subject of serious study by the most competent people in the land. It should be thoroughly examined in the universities, in the bar associations, in the civic societies and by legislative commissions. For unless democracy is to commit suicide by consenting to its own destruction, it will have to find some formidable answer to those who come to it saying, "I demand from you in the name of your principles the rights which I shall deny to you later in the name of my principles."

To every town and village,
To every inn and house:
The red rose is verboten—
The word to it is "Raus!"

I've stood it like a hero—
As every hero should—
For this land, ach du leiber!—
The roses I have stood!

I've taken them unwincing—
You've never seen me quake;
Oh, what I have endured
For Germany's sweet sake!

I've taken every lily
And braved the violet
Without a cry or whimper,
But they will get me yet.

I've met the flying daisy
And known the fierce barrage
Of high explosive nosegay—
And of long-range corsage!

I've heard the whine uncanny
Of sweet peas in the air—
But as the Frenchmen put it
So quaintly, "C'est la guerre!"

I've seen nasturtiums bursting
Along a battle line
And heard gardenias howling—
But courage has been mine!

I've faced the dum-dum dahlia
That makes a stout heart quail.
Geranium barrages
Have not made ME turn tail!

But there has come the moment—
It's here, I now declare:
No longer can your Fuehrer
Stand floral wear and tear.

A truce, I now proclaim it—
Let no more posies fly;
This brutal war has got me—
A rose-shocked man am I!

Palestine Crisis

By Barnet Nover

Which Way Will Britain Move?

MORE THAN 15 months have now elapsed since Great Britain, in a gesture of desperation that was also an admission of defeat, decided that the only way to solve the Palestinian problem was by dividing the land.

Adopting the Peel commission's recommendations as the official program of action, the British government announced a plan permanently to separate Jews and Arabs in the Holy Land. It proposed to create a tiny Jewish state fronting the Mediterranean, and an independent Palestine Arab state to be united with Transjordan. The holy cities, plus a corridor from Jerusalem to the sea, were to remain under British mandate.

The plan aroused little enthusiasm anywhere. The Jews did not like it because it would mean the restriction of the Zionist experiment to an area smaller than the State of Connecticut, yet containing within its meager borders an Arab minority of 250,000. The Arabs opposed it from the start on the ground that all of Palestine was theirs by right. The League mandates commission was critical. The House of Commons gave the plan a frigid reception.

PERHAPS the plan is not and never was workable. But it is obvious that whatever chance of success it may have had at the outset was wrecked beyond recovery by the long delay that followed the publication of the plan.

For 15 months Jews and Arabs alike have been faced by uncertainty regarding Palestine's political future. That was bad enough. But the same period has witnessed an incredible display of weakness by Great Britain in various parts of the world. Since July, 1937, the British government has shown a vast capacity to swallow its pride. The British Ambassador to China was machine-gunned by a Japanese aviator. Only feeble protests came from London. British ships were blown out of Spanish waters by insurgent planes. Nothing was done about it. The nonintervention plan which Great Britain had sponsored was openly flouted by Italy and Germany. Britain stood by and denied that anything of the kind was done. And in the recent Czechoslovak crisis, the British government revealed that to preserve the peace it was prepared to pay almost any price.

THERE CAN be no denying that in these 15 months British prestige has fallen to a very low ebb, a fact which the Arabs of Palestine and their supporters elsewhere have not failed to capitalize.

Their line of reasoning is clear. If the Japanese, the Italians, the Germans could intimidate the great British Empire, so could they. That is why during these last months the guerrilla war waged by Arab nationalists in Palestine has been directed fully as much against the British authorities as against the Jews. And at Cairo the Moslem Congress, which has espoused the cause of the Palestinian Arabs, adopted a resolution as drastic in its way as were the Godesberg demands of Adolf Hitler.

This resolution demanded an end to Jewish immigration into Palestine, repudiated the partition plan and said the British mandate over the Holy Land must be abolished.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to believe that these demands will meet with the acceptance of the British government. To do so would not only mean the violation by Great Britain of solemn obligations but would also imperil Britain's strategic interests in the Near East and at a time when these interests have enormously increased in importance as a result of Hitler's prospective hegemony over southeastern Europe.

There is a possibility, however, that in order to avoid accepting such a program in toto Great Britain may accept it in certain important essentials. It is rumored in this connection that peace may be bought at the expense of the obligations embodied in the existing mandate, presumably in the form of a capitulation to the Arab demands regarding the cessation of Jewish immigration.

WHETHER THESE rumors are true or not remains to be seen. But the suspicion that the British government will take drastic action to curtail or put a complete stop to Jewish immigration into Palestine is so strong that innumerable voices of protest are being raised in England and this country. Certainly, in view of the desperate refugee situation in central Europe, a situation enormously worsened by the Munich capitulation, the closing of one of the few spots on earth still open to Jewish refugees would be an immeasurable tragedy.

However the Woodhead commission, sent early this year to look into the feasibility of the partition plan and to re-examine the Palestinian problem generally, has not yet issued its report. There are, as yet, no clear indications of what action the British government plans to take. But Great Britain has at long last, begun to take measures to put down disorders in the Holy Land.

This is the one encouraging development in an otherwise tragic situation. Perhaps it foreshadows a determination on Britain's part to abandon the policy of bowing the knee to threats and terrorism. But in view of the way the London government, after mobilizing the home fleet, distributing gas masks to the population and in other ways indulging in a show of strength, gave way to Hitler, one cannot be too sure of that.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

AT THIS writing the plight—and it might, indeed, be termed just that—of the Civil Service Commission is not a happy one.

From the outset of its attempt to shape a merit system, enlarged and effective, around the June 24 Executive orders, there have trickled through reports of attempts by administrative heads to put the squeeze play on and exempt from the merit purview sundry workers.

These reports the commission, most charitably, has minimized. On several occasions formal statement has been made that departments and agencies are playing fair, are showing a disposition to give the civil service its due.

Then reports would trickle in that maybe the commission was being too fair-minded in its attitude—and the rumors would then pin down certain instances wherein certain fair-haired boys and girls, whole groups of them in cases—were slated never to see the light of civil service if chiefs could wave the wand of exclusion and prevent it.

But the commission continued charitable in its viewpoint, denied the rumors, as did Commissioner Ordway before the Society for Personnel Administration in the Y. W. C. A. on the evening of September 28. Said he:

"There has been considerable comment in the press concerning alleged requests for large numbers of additional exceptions. These reports are exaggerated."

It is good to know that this is true; that the co-operation is like that. The point is, has the co-operation been sustained? For while the commissioner was speaking there was reposing in the coffers of Uncle Sam's attorneys a remarkable statement of reasons why they should not have status at this time. And now the commission undoubtedly has the attorneys' report, and must spend a part of its busy time reading such lines as these:

"LEGAL technique is not a mechanical process; it requires personal judgment and creative imagination. That is particularly true of Government legal work; the drafting and application of complex statutes and regulations in the background of the case law, as well as other work of Government lawyers, involves many imponderables. This means that the task of fitting the person to the particular job and to the special needs of an integrated legal staff is a matter of delicate adjustment. Any system of appointment should, in each instance, fully utilize, among other things, the specific knowledge of appointing officers in the department or agency. These general considerations apply to attorneys in the lower as well as in the higher grades, partly because many of the appointing problems are the same for all grades and partly because the more responsible positions are usually filled from within the organization. Indeed, the usual lack of professional experience makes the factor of personality all the more significant in the selection of attorneys in the lower grades."

And then, in an appendage, the attorneys say: "Each department or agency affected by the Executive order should recommend that legal positions be excepted."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Seems Devoted to Girl When With Her; Ignores Her on Other Occasions; What Does It Mean?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a senior in college and in love with a boy in my home city. Since he has always lived there, naturally he knows a great many girls and during my absence at school he associates with them. I do not mind that; it is only to be expected; but what I would like to determine is how much he cares for me.

When we are together, he seems to care for me as much as I care for him. But when I am out with other friends, or another boy, he acts as if he doesn't know me. I am not home very often or for very long and haven't much chance to see him. We do not write to each other. I have some reason to think he likes another girl. But how can I make him like me best? It hurts me when he acts distant.

UNCERTAIN.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: It would appear that the young man is more than casually interested in you. As I recall, it is characteristic of college-age youths and maidens to go to rather exaggerated lengths to register indifference to their heart's desire when that person is giving a rival contender a break. I should say that your young man's pointed failure to see you when you are in the company of others (in such sharp contrast to his reassuring devotion when beauing you) is indicative of significant and jealous awareness. If he were, indeed, as genuinely disinterested in and as oblivious to your general conduct as he means to imply, he would greet you with unself conscious cordiality whenever your paths crossed.

As for how to effect a signed and sealed delivery of his heart into your keeping—that is an impossible order, under the circumstances. Since you see him but seldom and then only briefly; since you do not write to each other; and since another girl, implemented by the tremendous advantage of propinquity, has staked some claims to his fancy, I think he wisest and, in the long run, the most efficacious thing you can do is to keep him out of mind when he is out of sight. M. H.

'Disgusting Confessionals'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Do you think you and your "jury" of three men were entirely fair in condemning "Puzzled's fiance (in your column Sunday, October 9), simply because he refused to give lip-service to the ideal of premarital chastity? In the first place, I quite agree with Juror No. 3: It would have been better all around if the discussion between the two love birds had never arisen.

It seems to me we gals are looking for trouble when we drag our perspiring loved ones into one of those intimate, disgustingly curious confessionals, but if we get hurt in doing so we should be good sports and not howl about it. A sophisticated man, of course, recognizes our little game and gives us what we want—extravagant protestations and avowals. An unsophisticated man, however, has no trouble at all in hurting his opponent during the first five minutes of play.

In this particular case, the man didn't know his inquisitor's bete noir to be the subject of infidelity and so made the damaging admission that, under certain circumstances, he, as an average human being, might act thus and so. But he doesn't act that way; in fact (she says) "he's not the type who would deliberately run after women." Then why, in the name of fair play, attack him because he puts honesty before tact and gallantry?

The girl had probably already told her fiance what she tells you—that he was the one person who had been able to restore her shattered confidence in the opposite sex. Trying, no doubt, to deserve that compliment, and with bitter memories left over from his own broken love affair, this chap set out to put their relationship on a basis of truth at any price, and he probably means it with all his heart when he says he will be faithful after marriage. "Puzzled" doesn't know when she's well off!

ANONYMOUS WIFE.

The Honest Sinner

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a constant reader of your valuable column I have felt the urge to write you many times concerning various problems you have discussed, but as I am a very busy man I suppressed the inclination. However, I was intensely interested by the case of "Puzzled," discussed in your column October 9, who is troubled because her beau told her that there was a possibility he might be unfaithful to her before marriage, but that such a slip would in no way affect his fidelity after marriage.

I believe you were too hasty in denouncing the man for his attitude. The frank statement of this honest man dictates two avenues of thought. The reaction of the liberal mind would be that until he is married, he is answerable to his own conscience alone; and that one should not be too quick or too harsh in condemning the young for impulsive missteps. Another reaction is this: Is there not basic worth in that person who will give us the whole truth about himself? Doesn't honest confession provide the opportunity for discussing the undesirability of certain ideas and certain conduct, so that the one who is in error may be won over to the better side? Isn't it possible that by encouraging such a man always to be truthful, he would become a model citizen, with proper help and guidance?

In these days of hypocrites, deceivers and sneaky liars, we are prone to applaud the pious fraud who solemnly declares: "Never in my life would I do such-and-such a thing." But too often, and to our surprise and disgust, we later discover that these same persons are mixed up in the very relationships they profess to disdain—and have been for years. I wish, therefore, to say to "Puzzled" that she has a man of sterling quality, in the rough-diamond state. As I see it, her duty is to endeavor, with patience and kindness, to win him over to that which is right and proper. T. P.

Shirtwaist Holds Top Rank As Native American Fashion

Originated 4 Years Ago By Grace Ashley
Retains Popularity as All-Round Dress
Millions Sold in U. S., Abroad

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

This is the fourth in a series of fashion articles on the work of American designers.

THE ACADEMY award winner among American designed fashions is, without fear of dispute, the little shirtwaist dress. No apparel inspiration has so captivated and retained the fancy of the American public as has this go-to-work, go-to-church, go-to-cocktails dress.

Strictly a native product is the shirtwaist dress. Its origin is as American as Grace Ashley, acknowledged to have created this basic dress which became a fashion tradition on this side of the Atlantic.

Used Husband's Studs

Four years ago might have been the dark ages for a certain clique of well-bred, tailored women who had been dreaming of a perfectly plain dress which smacked of individuality. Such a woman was the customer who dropped into Grace Ashley's little dress shop in St. Louis with this unorthodox request "I want a blouse, not too simple, not too dressy, but different."

That was the chance for style immortality which the energetic Miss Ashley had been pining for. She cut out a plain classic blouse and inserted three of her husband's colored shirt studs in the bosom. The shirt grew into a stud dress, the dress into a formula.

That thousands, more likely millions, of these shirtwaists were sold like wild fire all over the world and, of course, mainly in this country, is a phenomenon which can only be explained as typically American. Since the American public is, at best, a fickle one, it is even more astonishing that the shirtwaist dress has remained practically an industry unto itself.

Paramount reason for its success is that it answered the old economic problem of demand and supply. Just such a dress had been staring European designers in the face for years, but the American desire for common-sense clothes and the American sense of humor in allying a man's shirt and dress studs to make a dress suitable to the rigors of even the cocktail hour have made such a style a saga among fashion elite.

Despite fabulous richness of styles this fall, the shirtwaist continues on its neatly starred course. Its practical tubability, its aplomb in office, school, home or at don't-dress dinners has made it a favorite among matrons as well as teen-agers, for its direct lines are flattering to almost every type and size.

Has Changed Little

Few real innovations have hit the ranks of this tailored dress, although dozens of less expensive imitations have been put on the market.

The front and back pleated skirt, as originally conceived by Grace Ashley, has undergone the whims of current season, such as manifold pleats. The blouse has been given individual versions, in some cases, with shirred, pleated or tucked bosoms anchored to comfortable yokes. Sleeves are long, cuffed or short, but at all times lines of the shirtwaist are dignified, active, capable and as gree moving as the American girl it was inspired by and for.

Bone Marrow Strong Factor In Anemia

Liver Stimulates It
Iron Also Effective
Spleen an Influence

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

WHEN WE CONSIDER the entire blood system, with the bone marrow as the place of origin of the blood cells and the spleen as the place of their destruction, it is easy to visualize the conception that the blood can be impoverished either by lowering the activity of the marrow or increasing the activity of the spleen.

In actual fact, both of these things occur and anemias of both types are known.

The activity of the marrow is depressed by a number of things. Any infection will do it. It is well known that after even sore throat or tonsillitis, there may be a weakness and pallor due to a mild anemia. As soon as the poison is eliminated, the marrow function is resumed again and the condition rapidly rights itself automatically.

We have gained great insight into the anemias from the work done by Whipple, Minot and Murphy, work which gained them the Nobel prize.

Described Anemia

About a century ago an English physician, Thomas Addison, described a peculiar anemia that came on without apparent cause, and usually progressed fatally. It was called pernicious anemia. In the course of time it was found that in this disease the walls of the stomach are completely atrophied. Then Whipple, Minot and Murphy, in 1925, showed that the stomach secretes a substance that stimulates the bone marrow to blood formation. So the stomach is also a part of the far-flung blood system.

This substance, known as the anti-anemic substance, is stored in the liver. Naturally, when the stomach is atrophied, the marrow ceases to work and anemia results. But the important findings of this work were that liver extract would entirely replace the missing substance and completely cure so-called pernicious anemia, which is now no longer pernicious. It is now called Addisonian anemia, after its discoverer.

Besides liver extract, iron will stimulate the bone marrow. And so will Vitamin B. A number of my readers write in to ask me where they can get Vitamin D. Ordinary yeast furnishes good quantities of it.

Old Fashions More Comfy As Revived

Actress Finds Out
Petticoats a Bother
Old Shoes?—Ouch!

FASHION designers today may hark back to the days of our great-great-grandmothers for inspiration but they certainly make great improvement in their modern creations so far as comfort is concerned. Miss Jeanne Madden, ingenue lead in the musical comedy "Knickerbocker Holiday," has made this discovery through bitter experience.

Wearing the dirndl of 1647 in the production, Miss Madden finds herself right up in style with the girls of today. But—unlike the modern girl—she must wear from eight to ten petticoats underneath. She also wears a corselet, but it must be laced tightly over stiff unyielding stays. Lacing a wife into one of these corselets was a job of a good half hour for Knickerbocker husbands, according to Miss Madden.

The young singer has found another analogy between present day and Knickerbocker costumes—the platform shoes that are having such a vogue this fall.

"These shoes were old stuff to the Dutch Amsterdam settlers," she said. "But if you had trod the boards of a New England theater for the last two weeks trying out a new play with your feet encased in thick soled patent leather boots, you would understand how fortunate modern women are in having their platform shoes made on neatly cut lasts to keep the feet trim and comfortable."

However, the biggest benefit in clothes the modern woman has is silk hosiery, in Miss Madden's belief. As one who wears heavy ribbed cotton hose in her stage role she can speak with authority.

"The type of stocking the stout burgher-mistresses wore amounted almost to an undergarment, for they were opera length and extremely warm" she said. "Naturally the clothes luxury in which I revel most off the stage is sheer silk hosiery."

Miss Madden also had to sacrifice her ambitions for a sophisticated high-swept coiffure when she took the role of Tina, the innkeeper's daughter of seventeenth century Amsterdam. To portray the clean-scrubbed, apple-cheeked Tina she reverted to the long bob.

"Well I'd certainly like to see old Harold. You know its funny about those things. Say, did you know that this Dr. Dizzle, this big psychologist everybody's talking about, was that funny Theodore Dizzle who used to be—"

"Did I know it? Why say, he used to be a sort of boy friend of mine."

"No! Why he used to be crazy about me. We all thought he was a joke."

"So did we. My family used to tease the life out of me about him."

"So did mine. Why I'd actually hide when I saw him coming."

"Well he was simply determined to marry me."

"How funny! What I mean is, isn't it funny that he should turn out that way? I wonder who he married."

"I remember her! Well of all things. You know I'd like to see old Ted Drizzle again."

"So would I. The next time I'm in New York I'm going to look him up."

"I'll tell you another one from home that's making a name for himself—Lem Posey. You know, the movie actor——"

"Do I know! Why he gave me an awful rush when I was in high school."

"Well he was practically one of our family when I was growing up. Everybody thought Lem and I'd get married . . . but I just couldn't see it that way."

"Well I never considered marrying Lem . . . though of course he was good looking and all that. You know I'd love to see Lem again."

"So would I. I think sometime I'll drop him a line . . . and send Junior's picture."

"Say before I forget it, did you ever know Webster Speel—I mean Senator Speel?"

"Well, yes, he used to come to our house some. Of course he was lots older . . ."

"No! Not Webster Speel."

"Yes they really say he's the coming man——"

"Well of all things. Webb Speel! Why he used to take me around a lot.'

"He was awfully nice to me. Of course I looked on him as an old man. I just couldn't see him."

"I couldn't either. Of course though he wasn't really old . . . It's funny how silly girls are."

"Yes isn't it?"

Your Figure

Sleep Well To Stay Young, Star Advises

Kitty Carlisle Does It
Warns Against Drink
Recommends Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain.

"ENOUGH SLEEP and not too much alcohol—and you can keep your face looking 18 right up to the day your are 35," says Kitty Carlisle, that delightfully versatile singing star of the stage and screen, who believes in proving things for herself.

In all honesty, it must be stated here that Miss Carlisle has quite a way to go before she reaches the age of 35, but even so, she looks much younger than she has any right to.

Practice Preachments

So there may be something in her theory. At any rate, Miss Carlisle is working on it. She averages nine hours' sleep a night and, in show business where rehearsals sometimes go on for 48 hours at a stretch, she learned to go to sleep at the drop of a hat. "I guess I am the sleepingest woman in the United States," she admits. Well . . . maybe that is the reason she looks so wide awake!

Another reason Miss Carlisle looks even younger than her age—she is in her early twenties—is that she believes in exercise. If she didn't, she wouldn't have a figure like this: Height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 120 pounds; bust, 34 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 36 inches.

The way it happened, she couldn't help believing in exercises . . . she went to school in Switzerland, and at this school the girls started the day with an hour's gymnastics, usually out of doors, and then they did things like skiing and skating every leisure minute.

Own Exercise Method

She has since, however, developed her own method for specific exercise. "When I do an exercise that makes me sore, then I know I've hit the right muscles for that spot." With arms and shoulders so much in the limelight, she thinks exercises for this portion of the figure are particularly important. You place one clenched fist in the palm of the other hand and then hold the hands at chest level, elbows out at either side. Push against resistance and force the hands first to one side, then to the other. Such exercises as this one not only beautify the arms and shoulders but also tend to improve the bust contour.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 12.

THE MOST gabbed-about show of the early season exploded among us not long ago, the same being "Kiss the Boys Good-by," the work of that Claire Boothe Brokaw Luce, spouse of the publisher of Time, Life, etc., and author of the two-season vitriol hit, "The Women."

ALICE HUGHES

Being a "smart" piece, Claire's new gem will undoubtedly have a good go on Broadway. It will be one of those "have you seen?" shows, and if you haven't seen, you will as soon as possible, so you can tell the next asker yes. Then, too, this lady is one of the most astonishing crack-writers of her time, and so fast do the nifties tumble in "Kiss the Boys Good-by" that the pace is almost too furious and the evening is deafeningly shrill. Cool heads amid the ermine and lame at the opening made the point that every leading character in the whole dad-burned thing is pretty foul. This doesn't make for a good play. In "The Women" practically all the ladies were beasts of the first water, but the central character was a lovely, wholesome woman entirely sinned against by her evil sisters. She was the good deed in the naughty world. There's none in the new one.

However, the leading lady, Miss Helen Claire, is so outstanding on several scores that she rates a piece to herself, which she'll get. And as a social first night shambles, this premiere was as loud, pushing, bad-mannered and vulgar as Broadway can produce—and that is the world's worst. Never have I seen a crowd as gay, colorful and peppy so early in the year. No one ever bothered to pick up the diamonds dropped in the crush. Everybody stared, nudged and pushed, as usual, and the general feeling was, as the last curtain fell on Mrs. Luce's fireworks, "Well, Broadway's herself again—the old hag.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN— Family note: Martin, now a stretching six, has been at school four weeks. In that time he has worn out a pair of shoes and a school bag. He has also worn out three teachers . . . Note to movie fans—If you saw a headline in a paper saying "Mrs. Fred Perry Hurt in Motor Crash," would that mean Helen Vinson to you? The lovely movie actress, who hasn't done screen work since marrying the tennis star, wasn't badly hurt in the crack-up, but maybe she was when our conservative papers wrote her up this way. The dear old tabloids, of course, made it "Helen Vinson." Which do you prefer, Helen? . . . I finally managed to get a good look at Robert Donat, that handsomest of British film actors. Here on a short trip with his pretty, dark wife, he says he is happy about his part in the forthcoming flick version of "The Citadel," Cronin's best seller, because it is a real character role and not just a pretty lover business. P. S.—The Donats have three kids, a lot of money and a mighty good time

We're always hearing about the lovely, sinful old days when handsome men drank wine from the petted dancer's slipper. Now Alex Tarzaidze, the perfume man, has combined this pretty thought with a hint of stuffing the Exmas stocking by putting a bag of his best bath salts in a life-size pink satin ballet slipper. Just another notion for the holiday trade, and a pretty neat one, too.

D. C. Hopes Jarnefelts Won't Be Transferred

Envoy Is Rumored Going to Italy
He's Made Capital Finland-Conscious
Wife Says They're Not Sure of Change

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Capital society hopes it isn't so—the report that the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt are to be transferred to Italy. One of the town's most popular diplomatic couples, the Jarnefelt's not only have scores of friends in social and official circles, but they've also done a first-class job of making Washington in general Finland-conscious.

When they give a reception, the honor guest frequently is some important person from their homeland. When they entertain at tea, you can expect a Finnish musician to play, and their luncheons and dinners invariably feature native dishes and wines.

Last winter, the Jarnefelts introduced to Washington one of their countrymen after another and finally wound up the season with a series of parties for the Finnish notables who came over for the tercentenary celebration.

In 1935, when the minister and his attractive wife arrived, residents here knew little about Finland except, of course, that it had paid its debt. Now, thanks to the Jarnefelts, their country has taken on new importance in the eyes of Washington. So if there's any special need for a couple of exceptionally good "Finland salesmen" in Mussolini's land, the minister and his wife would be ideal.

"WE DON'T KNOW anything about it," Mme. Jarnefelt said yesterday when I asked about the reported shift. "We've heard there are to be some changes but haven't learned whether we will be moved." According to a recent dispatch from Helsingfors, however, not only has Minister Jarnefelt been slated for the Italian post, but his successor already has been chosen. The latter, say "informed sources," is Hjalmar Procope, who has twice served his country as minister of foreign affairs.

Almost a year ago Mr. Procope was a guest at the Legation of Finland. Handsome and youngish (he is only 49), with an engaging personality and a flair for saying the right thing at the right time, he made a big hit at the reception the Jarnefelts gave for him. His visit was brief and he emphasized that it had "no official connection."

Dozens of Washingtonians met him at the party; liked him; wanted to learn more about him. Some already knew his background; that he had served as minister of commerce, as minister of foreign affairs twice, and as his country's representative at the League of Nations Council; also at the World Economic Conference and the Inter-Parliamentary Commission. In addition to laurels won as a statesman, Mr. Procope (pronounced PRO-co-pay) has made a name for himself as a writer on economics and trade treaties.

All in all, if Minister Jarnefelt has to go—and we're still hoping he won't—Mr. Procope seems to fit the next best bill.

HERE AND THERE: Maj. and Mrs. Gist Blair have returned to Washington for the winter and have re-opened their residence at 1651 Pennsylvania avenue . . . Their daughter, Miss Laura Blair, has resumed her studies at Foxcroft School . . . Back to Washington after residing in London and New York for almost 12 years has come Robert Lee Keeling. He has taken an apartment at the Highlands, where his brother, the Rev. Stewart Keeling, retired, also resides. A brother-in-law of Stilson Hutchins, one of the founders of The Washington Post, Mr. Keeling has an extensive circle of friends here. Born in Baltimore, he spent much time in the Capital, where he won wide acclaim as a painter of minatures. Returning here for a brief stay a few years ago, he did a minature of President Roosevelt. Others who have posed for him include two wives of Presidents, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and Mrs. Grover Cleveland; the first Lady Curzon (Mary Leiter), Mrs. Henry May, and Mme. Kaathoven. He has exhibited in the Royal Academy in London and also in exclusive galleries in Paris and New York.

Sally Clark, sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, will scrap her singing career in favor of marriage. From Nahant, Mass., comes word that she will sing no more for money after the close of her urrent engagement . . . also, that the date of her marriage to to George X. McClanahan, of New York, has been moved up from January 6 to December 3 . . . Both John Roosevelt and his wife, the former Anne Clark, will be attendants in the wedding, which will take place in the Emmanuel Church in Boston.

Robert E. Lee Fete Held at Stratford Hall

Many Attend From D. C. Greeted by Mrs. Lanier
Dr. Monaghan Speaks

Many members of Washington society were Virginia-bound yesterday to attend the celebration held each year in connection with their pet project, the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation at Stratford Hall. Guests were greeted on their arrival by Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, of Greenwich, Conn., president of the foundation, and by Maj. Gen. B. R. Cheatham, U. S. A., retired, resident superintendent of Stratford.

The speaker of the afternoon was Dr. Frank Monaghan, of Yale University, and research director for the New York World's Fair of Tomorrow. His subject, however, was "The World of Yesterday," and a few informal notes were added to Dr. Monaghan's address afterward by Bacchus White, who was born back in 1848, and remembers Gen. Lee.

The directors of the foundation will remain at Stratford for several days for their annual conclave, and during that period will reside in the attractive "cabins" which each of them has on the old estate.

At the luncheon yesterday (the menu was composed of special Virginia ham, potatoes and other delicacies raised at Stratford), the Washington group included Mrs. Casenove Lee, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, Mrs. William Leahy, Mrs. Louis Greene, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mrs. Fred Essary, Mrs. Gardner Boothe, Mrs. Henry Fairfax and Mrs. Ridley McLean.

Also present were Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Miss Agnes Shands, rs. Matthew Delianey and Mrs. Colt deWolf.

From Wilmington came Mrs. Alfred R. duPont; also there was Mrs. D. C. Sands, representing the Virginia Garden Club, whose efforts have restored the grounds at Stratford to their old-time glory; and still another of the many present was Mrs. William Cabell Bruce, of Baltimore, one of the foundation's most loyal supporters.

Spanish Fete Celebrated at Embassy Here

Honors Motherland
Envoy Makes Address
Senorita Laura Assists

"LA FIESTA de la Raza," the occasion on which residents of Spanish speaking countries pay tribute to the mother country, was celebrated last evening at a reception at the Spanish Embassy.

Senorita Laura de los Rios flew to Washington from Wellesley College, where she is teaching, to help her father receive representatives of about 20 Spanish speaking countries and a number of other Washington residents. Senora de los Rios, who is ill with a cold, did not appear at the party. Assisting Senorita Laura and the Ambassador in receiving was Senora de Lecuona, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Embassy. Her frock of black fish net was made with a full skirt, a fitted bodice and a white Peter Pan collar that was most becoming to her cropped coiffure.

SENORITA DE LOS RIOS was gowned in blue and silver lame and wore a pink rose in her dark hair. Although she did not assist in receiving, Senorita Isabel Garcia Lorca, a house guest at the Embassy, lingered with the group in the drawing room. She wore a frock of electric blue crepe, with a flowing scarf draped across her shoulders.

A number of Columbus Day celebrations, including a big banquet at the Madrillon Restaurant, caused most of the guests to arrive late last evening, some coming in at almost 11 o'clock.

EARLIER, however, the Ambassador welcomed the guests and spoke briefly about "La Fiesta de la Raza" and its origin many years ago in Argentina, when natives of that country sought some means of paying homage to Spain. Shortly before he began his talk members of the Mexican exhibition riding team arrived, accompanied by Dr. Luis Quintanilla, Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, and Col. Teofilo G. Jasso, Mexican Military Attache.

Others among the guests were Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union; the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza; Col. Pedro Zanni, of the Argentine Embassy, and Senora de Zanni; Luis Coll-Pardo, of the Venezuelan Legation, and Senora de Coll-Pardo; the former United States Minister to Venezuela and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin; Manuel Crespo, of the Legation of Ecuador, and Senora de Crespo; Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas; Paulo G. Hasslocher, Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, and Dr. Julian R. Caceres, of the Legation of Honduras.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE TOWN HALL of Washington is angling for former President Benes of Czechoslovakia to speak at its opening lecture next month . . . and have you heard how Parisians are now pronouncing Chamberlain's name—j'aime Berlin?

DUDLEY HARMON.

WILLIAM BULLITT, Ambassador to France, is expected to sign his name today in the big black ledger in the State Department where our diplomats are supposed to register when they come to the Capital. He arrived late yesterday afternoon and with his secretary is putting up at the Anchorage. Aft.. conversations on "the situation" with officials here Mr. Bullitt is expected to enjoy a real vacation for the six months due him.

While here for a stay last spring, Ambassador Bullitt was honored by Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis at one of the largest dinners of the season—about 100 were present.

THE NEWS that Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, who can't seem to stay out of headlines in spite of trying hard, will visit Maj. and Mrs. Truman Smith in Berlin is of interest to Washington. Maj. Smith, who is our Military Attache at the embassy there, was attached to the Army War College here several years ago and he and his wife had a charming house on N street in Georgetown.

The Smiths and the Lindbergh's are close friends and the Army officer and Mrs. Smith have visited the flier at his home in England. Curiously enough, Maj. Smith is even taller than Col. Lindbergh—well over 6 feet—while his wife is as tiny as Mrs. Lindbergh.

Maj. Smith, an extremely able person, spent much of his childhood in Germany and thus speaks the language perfectly, one of several reasons why he has been kept on at his Berlin post for four or five years.

The Lindberghs are expected to stay with them for several weeks while the aviator visits German aircraft factories.

REPORTED rather disillusioned with life in Hollywood, Miss Beth Thompson has returned from a stay in the movie city and has joined her mother, Mrs. Smith Hempstone, and Commander Hempstone. They are all spending the winter with Theodore Noyes, Mrs. Hempstone's father, at his house on New Hampshire avenue. Miss Thompson has made quite a name for herself as an actress.

Her younger sister, Mary Dora Thompson, will be presented to Capital society at a tea December 2.

MARTHA (IVY) BACON, daughter of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, will be among the bridesmaids at the wedding in New York on Saturday of Anne Child to Charles Dick, of Philadelphia. One of the most important events of the season, the ceremony will take place at St. Bartholomew's, and will be followed by a reception at the Cosmopolitan Club. Mrs. E. W. Pavenstedt, mother of the bride, and Mr. Pavenstedt made their home in New York before coming to Washington several years ago.

ABOUT THE TOWN: Betty Shouse's training for the job she now holds in the W. P. A. bookbindery was gained on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. Until recently the Blisses employed several young ladies to rebind every volume in their enormous library . . . Prince "Mike" Romanoff was glimpsed the other day in the Mayflower lobby, looking quite at home . . . Mrs. Dwight Davis returned yesterday from a brief trip to New York. Mr. Davis' daughter, Mrs. Roger Makins, is staying at her father's former home on Kalorama road before returning to her family in England . . . Mrs. Joseph Bradley and her daughter, Mary, had friends for dinner the other night and discovered that a family of skunks had migrated to a shelter beneath the living room. So the guests spent the entire evening after dinner in reading upon the habits and home life of skunks.

FROM LENOX, MASS., to Mukden, Manchuria, is quite a trip, but the latter city is the next destination of Mrs. James Graham Parsons, jr., who is now in the Berkshire town. Mr. Parsons has joined her for a vacation from State Department duties, and in a few weeks they will set off with their young child for Mukden. They are both looking forward to living there, despite the fact that there are probably not more than four or five other Americans in the place.

The Castros Entertain at Tea For Minister Frazer and Sister

Many of Latin-American Corps Present
Party Also 'Warms" Attractive House

Out almost to the suburbs of Washington drove many members of the Latin-American Diplomatic Corps yesterday afternoon for the tea given by the Salvadorean Minister and Senora de Castro in honor of our Minister to that country, Robert Frazer, and his sister, Miss Margaret Frazer.

The party was also in the nature of a housewarming, as the Minister and Senora de Castro moved to 3232 Ellicott street only a week or so ago. The house, a gray stone building with wide lawns, has all the informality of a home rather than a legation, and guests wandered about the large rooms yesterday.

The drawing room has dark paneling interspersed with blue wallpaper, and the floor-length hangings are deep blue velvet. Large vases of pink gladioli and a bowl of red roses on the piano added to the decorations. The dining room, on the other side of the residence, is paneled in white and has handsome blue and white draperies at the window.

Senora de Castro wore a long gown of russet velvet with a clip of brilliants at the V neckline. Miss Frazer was attired in a street length brown silk frock with a red velvet hat with a brim. A gold belt completed her ensemble.

Typical of the lavishness of Latin American hospitality, the buffet was loaded with a variety of sandwiches and canapes. One of the most unusual dishes was a bowl of mayonnaise and shrimp set in a huge cabbage whose center had been hollowed out.

The Castros have six children, all of whom were in evidence yesterday helping the guests. Senorita Angela Cromeyer, sister of Senora de Castro, also assisted during the afternoon.

Among the early arrivals were the Nicaraguan Minister and Senor de De Bayle, the latter wearing a green silk frock with a gold clip. Our Minister to Ecuador, Boaz Long, in Washington on leave, was accompanied by Mrs. Long, in black with furs. Mrs. Ronald Fisher was accompanied by her son, Dorsey Fisher of the State Department, who formerly served in El Salvador. Another mother and son combination was Mrs. Louis Schapiro and Dr. Mark Schapiro.

Others present included Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; the Siamese Minister, Phya Abhibal Rajamaitri; Ricardo Castro, Costa Rican Minister—Senora de Castro is in her homeland for an extended stay; the Charge d'Affaires of Honduras, Julian R. Caceres, and the Secretary of the Colombian embassy and Senora de Vargas.

Cavalry Teams See Annapolis

Escorted impressively to Annapolis and back by a squad of policemen on motorcycles, members of the Chilean and Mexican army teams visited the Naval Academy yesterday afternoon as guests of Admiral Wilson Brown, the superintendent.

Greeted at the gate of the academy grounds by Admiral Brown and members of his staff, the party was conducted on a thorough sightseeing tour and witnessed a dress parade of the midshipmen.

After these ceremonies the officers attended a cocktail party given by Lieut. R. C. Brownlee, aide to the Admiral, and Mrs. Brownlee, who had built a bar in their house especially for the occasion.

The Chilean Ambassador, Manuel Trucco, and his two daughters, Senoritas Marta and Rebeca Trucco, were members of the party which left the Shoreham at 12:30 yesterday. The envoy has changed the date of the reception he will give for the members of the teams from October 16 to October 20, the opening day of the show. This was done so members of the United States Army team, who will arrive in Washington October 17, may share honors with the foreign horsemen.

Others in yesterday's group were the Embassy Counselor and Senora de Huneeus, the Air Attache, Squadron Leader Ismael Sarasua, and the Military Attache and Senora de Canas. From the Mexican embassy came the Military Attache and Senora de Gonzalez Jasso, Senorita Marta Guajadeo, niece of the Ambassador; the Legal Counselor and Senora de Cordova; the First Secretary and Senora de Fuentes and the Assistant Military Attache and Senora de Calderon.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Inter-American Horse Show Association; Louis Johnson and Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, retired, vice presidents; Thomas P. Morgan, jr., secretary-treasurer, and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, chief of Field Artillery, were some of the distinguished American officials in the group which made the trip to Annapolis.

Assisting Lieut. and Mrs. Brownlee at their party were a group of naval officers from Annapolis and their wives, including Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. S. S. Bunting, Commander and Mrs. Paul Cassard, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Robert Jasperson, Lieut. and Mrs. Ford Taylor, Mrs. Katharine Neff, Lieut. and Mrs. Lyon Miles, Commander and Mrs. Tucker Gibbs.

French Envoy Entertains With Movie Showing

The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, entertained last evening with a showing of the French film "Grande Illusion" at the embassy. A buffet supper followed.

The movie, which shows life among French and German soldiers in a German prison camp during the war, has been banned in Italy and Germany. Produced by Jean Renoir, son of the famous artist, it is based on peace and brotherhood among all nations. It was shown on Tuesday evening to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

Count de Saint Quentin will leave the end of the month for Boston, and will visit Harvard and other New England universities.

Lieut. Alan D. Clark Visiting His Mother

Lieut. Alan D. Clark, son of Mrs. Walter L. Clark and the late Lieut. Col. Clark, is visiting his mother at her apartment at the Woodley.

Lieut. Clark recently completed a course in the advance flying school at Kelly Field, Tex., and after a short leave will take up his new duties with the United States Air Corps at Langley Field, Va. Mrs. Clark plans to lease a house in Hampton, Va., where Lieut. Clark and her daughter, Ruth, will live with her.

Doris Johnson Married Here

Wearing traditional ivory satin, Miss Doris Louise Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Johnson, of this city, was married at 10 o'clock yesterday morning to Pat J. Coppola, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Coppola, of New Haven, Conn. The ceremony took place at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, the Rev. Father Wempe officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her frock was made on princess lines with a heart-shaped neckline, and her veil was caught with cluster of orange blossoms. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Eleanor F. Dewhurst served as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Naomi Eddins Johnson, sister of the bride, and the Misses Lucy and Josephine Coppola, sisters of the bridegroom. Miss Dewhurst wore blue tuft taffeta and a shoulder-length veil with a bandeau of red roses and carried red roses. The bridesmaids were attired in similar frocks of red and carried pink roses.

Dr. Louis J. Goffredi was best man, and the ushers were Lanier Drake, Angelo Coppola and Ralph Coppola, the latter two brothers of the bridegroom.

A breakfast at Brooke Tea House followed the ceremony. Mrs. Johnson wore a frock of wine crepe; Mrs. Coppola was in teal blue crepe and both had corsages of tailisman roses.

After a motor trip through New England, the couple will live at University Park here.

Mr. Coppola was graduated in 1934 from Catholic University.

Miss Edith Pearson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pearson, of Wyoming avenue, offered her choice between a trip abroad and a coming-out party this winter, chose the former. Recently returned from a tour of Europe, she will not make her debut to Capital society until next year.

Miss Pearson is a sister of the Misses Katherine and Gertrude Pearson, both of whom were presented to Capital society in recent years.

Wallace Lays Blame For Slump on G. O. P.

Addresses Woman's National Democratic Club Says Opponents Sacrificed Future to the Past Holds Debt-Making Outdid 'Thrifty' New Deal

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Blaming the "spendthrift policies of the Republicans in the '20's" for present conditions and warning that a lack of understanding of problems of taxation, tariffs and the balance of trade "may come home to us through the blood of our sons," Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace last night addressed the Woman's National Democratic Club.

He spoke on the subject, "Thrifty Democrats" at the organization's first fall dinner, held at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, and attended by more than 100.

He charged the Republican Party with having been guilty of "an extraordinary spendthrift policy compared to which the Democratic Party is niggardly in its handling of money. The prosperity of the 20's borrowed from the future and the thrifty Democrats are paying for it."

He explained in relation to the debt policy of the Republican regime, that the debt had increased $3,000,000,000 a year for a period of ten years. The Republicans "got by" with it, he said, because the increase was in private debt while the Federal debt decreased.

"Private capital was horribly indiscreet for ten years, has rested for nine, and now should be ready to come out of the hole and get to work again," he declared.

Foreign Loans Hard on Farmers

Discussing the policy of the Republican Party on debts outside of the United States, he asserted large loans by private interests to foreign governments had been largely responsible for the difficulties of the 30s. As soon as loans ceased, there was a serious problem in farm products.

"Those of us in the farm fight in the 20s pointed out there would be serious trouble in farm products when lending came to an end," he said. "The Republicans didn't want our advice. That is what, more than anything else, caused me to cease being a Republican as soon as my father ceased being Secretary of Agriculture in a Republican Administration."

We haven't faced the farm problem until the last two years, because of the droughts which cut down production in 1934 and 1936, said Secretary Wallace. The enormous abundance we now have is calculated to give an auspicious start to the plan for an "ever-normal granary," to balance the poor years against the good. The American people, he said, should have courage to pursue this plan as Joseph did in Bible times, against a period of famine.

Professing amusement at the accusations of the Republicans that there is scarcity in crops and that the Government is unable to control production, Secretary Wallace refuted the charges. There is a cotton supply sufficient for four years ahead, he said, a large supply of wheat, and corn which is twice the carry-over of last year's crop.

He charged the so-called farm revolt was stirred up by business men who would serve their own interests by it.

Sees Democrats Burying Hatchet

He closed his talk with a brief reference to the division in the ranks of Democrats, defining the conservatives as those with the principles of the early nineteenth century who do not realize what's going on in the world today, and the others as those of the New Deal who think the world is changing faster than it really is.

He gave the former credit for being more progressive than the most progressive Republicans, and predicted that no matter what their differences might be in the spring, "when October rolls around they begin to fight shoulder to shoulder."

A guest of honor at last night's dinner with Secretary Wallace, was Mrs. Wallace. Mrs. J. Brent Clarke presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, whose husband died but a few weeks ago. Others at the head table were Mrs. Blair Banister, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Meigs and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Porter.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Sue Wants to Know

When rightly used you will agree
Your tongue to knowledge is the key.
—The Old Naturalist.

Through the asking of questions much knowledge is to be gained that could be obtained in no other way. Furthermore, the simplest question deserves an answer if it is asked in sincere desire to gain knowledge. A question never is silly just because it happens to be about something of such common knowledge that you think everybody should know it.

Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel was begging. There was no doubt about it. He was begging openly and shamelessly. He was sitting up with his beautiful broad silvery tail against his back and curling backward at the tip. His whole attitude was beseeching. He was begging without speech. Anyone would have known that just to look at him.

From a pocket the Old Naturalist took a hickory nut. He tossed it to Happy Jack. Happy Jack picked it up. He examined it over and over in his paws. Then he dropped it and resumed his begging.

"What did he drop that nut for? Doesn't he like that kind of nut?" Sue wanted to know.

The Old Naturalist chuckled. "He loves hickory nuts," said he. "That is, he loves good hickory nuts. That particular nut isn't a good one."

"Then what did you give it to him for? Wasn't that kind of a mean trick?" This from Sammy.

"I didn't know it wasn't good when I gave it to him, but he knew without even making a hole in it. Don't ask me how he knew it. He just did. He always does. You won't find any bad nuts hidden away by him. He would make a good nut inspector. Here is another nut for him. Now we'll get that other one and crack it to prove whether Happy Jack was right or mistaken," said the Old Naturalist.

Happy Jack scampered away with the last nut and Sammy picked up the other. "It looks all right to me," said he, handing it to the Old Naturalist.

Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel was begging

The latter cracked the nut between two stones. The meat was shriveled and useless, but externally there had been nothing to indicate this. Yet Happy Jack had known almost the instant he had picked it up. He was returning now to beg for another.

"I love him," declared Sue, "but I've often wondered what good he is. I mean is he of any use? I suppose everything and everybody is of some use, but it is hard to see what some are good for.

"He's good to eat," declared Sammy. "I know a man who goes squirrel hunting every fall."

"Yes," agreed the Old Naturalist sadly, "squirrels are hunted in the name of sport, though what sport there can be in shooting such beautiful, half-tame creatures is something I cannot understand. Few, if any, who shoot them ever really need them for food"

"Their skins can be used for coats," ventured Tommy.

"Yes," agreed the Old Naturalist, "they can be and they are and they make lovely coats. But think how many little lives are ended to make one coat that never is really needed."

"Then I don't see that Squirrels are of much use," said Sue.

"My dear, it gives you a lot of pleasure just to see them frisking about, and having them to feed. Most people, and especially children, love to watch them and make friends with them. I can't think of any way of being of greater use than in making people happy. Can you? And Happy Jack is of use in other ways. Follow me."

So saying the Old Naturalist led the way to the edge of the little clearing. He stopped beside a little stake driven in the ground. Close to it was a little tree. "That," said he, "is a young hickory tree. Two years ago I was over here and saw Happy Jack bury a nut. I drove that stake to mark the place and in the spring I came to see if he had dug up that nut or if he had forgotten it. I found he had forgotten or hadn't needed it and it had sprouted. I can show you many other trees planted by Happy Jack. Some day they will be great trees bearing nuts, valuable not only for the nuts they bear but for the lumber that may be cut from them. Many splendid trees in the Green Forest were planted by Squirrels. So you see Happy Jack is of real use."

20,000 Riot Seeking Jobs as Charwomen

Many Are Injured
1,500 Get Applications
Colored Leader Jailed

Nearly 20,000 women stampeded the Fourth Precinct Police Station yesterday in an effort to obtain 2,000 applications for jobs as Federal charwomen. The jobs at present are nonexistent.

The avalanche of women forced officers of the Civil Service Commission to suspend distribution after 1,500 applications had been given out.

Police reserves were called to quell the mob. Several were injured.

Traffic on E street southwest between Fourth and Seventh streets had to be detoured.

Minor injuries were suffered by Mrs. T. E. Ryan, 478 D street southwest, a spectator, when she fell and cut her head while trying to get out of the way of a motorcycle policeman. She was taken to Casualty Hospital with Carrie Fields, colored, 131 Randolph street northeast, who was hurt in the milling crowd. The hospital then sent an abulance to the scene and treated several others.

At the height of the trouble, Capt. Oscar Letterman, of the Fourth Precinct, ordered the arrest of Edgar George Brown, colored, of 1717 Euclid street northwest, head of the United Government Employes, a colored organization. He was charged with disorderly conduct and posted $25 collateral for his release.

Policeman D. H. Mayo, who arrested Brown, said the man resisted him when he tried to move the crowd which was greatly enlarged by spectators. Brown denied the charge and asked for a Police Court hearing today.

Applicants, whose names are to be used to build up an eligibility list at the Civil Service Commission, began forming in line along E street about 8 p. m. Tuesday. As the hours went by, more and more women took their places.

Milk crates, old boxes and newspapers were placed on the sidewalk. Some of the waiting job seekers were content to just sit. Others slept on the sidewalk on newspapers.

The mad rush, which for many minutes looked like it would assume riot proportions, began practically without notice. It is believed to have been caused by those behind trying to push toward the station house. Police had stretched strong ropes to hold the line in form but the crowding quickly snapped that. When the lines were broken, Capt. Letterman ordered the doors closed.

Most of the applications had been given out then. But the surge was so great, William C. Hull and James B. Baugh, jr., Civil Service officials, who were giving out the blanks, decided to quit. They had to be taken from the vicinity in a patrol wagon.

It was explained that present job lists are sufficient to take care of any job vacancies which might occur during the next year. The applications yesterday were to strengthen this list. The jobs pay $1,080 yearly.

After the distribution of applications was halted, the women refused to vacate the vicinity. They milled around for hours expecting the return of the Civil Service commissioners. Nearly 200 women were still present at 5 p. m. yesterday.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Garment Workers Call on Roosevelt for Labor Peace; A. F. L. Rank and File Defeat Plank Assailing New Deal achieved only through the sacrifice and the removal from leadership of its two most distinguished generals.

Labor

"The basis of labor peace lies much deeper, indeed, than the personal surface clash between Lewis and Green. Nor, do we believe, will peace be brought nearer through the brand new suggestion for the appointment of a fact-finding commission for labor and industry.

"Peace can, and will, come only through the recognition by both sides that there is room in the great American labor household for both craft unionism in the skilled trades and for industrial unionism in the mass production industries.

"It is not a day too late," nor an hour too early, for the resumption of peace conversations. We feel thankful to the President for his frank and timely initiative in urging upon the federation leadership assembled at Houston 'to leave open every possible door of access to peace.'

"The President, we believe, is the only person who could bring the representatives of the warring labor factions together. We respectfully suggest that he call at once into conference the leadership of both C. I. O. and A. F. L. to explore once more, in a mood of sincere receptivity, the possibilities of reconciliation."

New Deal Upheld

Houston, Tex., Oct. 12 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt and the New Deal won an indirect vote of confidence from the American Federation of Labor today when a rank-and-file rebellion pigeonholed a report from the policy-making resolutions committee condemning Administration policies as socialistic.

It was one of the few crushing defeats that the resolution committee has suffered in years. Prepared under the guidance of Matthew Woll, chairman of the group, and by its secretary, John P. Frey, head of the metal trades department, the report was referred to the executive council "for further study."

This means that the council which, in its annual report, bitterly attacked the Administration of some New Deal laws including the Wagner act but which was careful not to criticize Mr. Roosevelt personally, cannot dehorn the resolution committee's report in time to present it again before this federation convention which is due to adjourn Friday noon.

"Don't Fear Dictatorship"

Despite protestations by Woll to the contrary, the majority of the delegates regarded the committee's report as a sweeping denunciation of the New Deal. This interpretation was reached in the face of the committee's twice-emphasized declaration that it did not question the "sincerity of the motives" behind New Deal legislation.

The committee said that "we have no fear of a dictatorship in the United States" and added that "the whole drive to extend the authority of the State is thus far one which aims to bring greater opportunity to the masses of the people."

"We give full credit for right motives," said the report. "But we have been too willing to accept gains at the price of lost liberty and lost capacity for self-determination and self-action. We may well hesitate and consider how much farther we will travel in the present path."

Warning that the tendency of today is for "the state to take over more and more functions which we believe belong to labor," the report said it must be "clear to every American that the philosophy which is being developed in action, by which ever-increasing domain is being given to the state, is expressive of the philosophy and the practice of socialism."

The report expressed belief that business has "learned the folly of its earlier ways," and called upon industry, upon management and upon finance to join with labor in combating "state supremacy" through co-operative solution of industrial problems.

"We have come to a time when there must be a halt, or we fear that there can thereafter be no halt," the committee warned.

Woll had barely concluded reading the report when George Q. Lynch, chief of the pattern makers, demanded that it be referred to the executive council.

He charged that it represented only Woll's philosophy, that Woll reached a conclusion—that business today was conscious of the error of its ways—which "hardly squares with my experience," and refused to subscribe to a general condemnation of the Administration.

Woll protested that the report was the expression of the full committee, that it questioned motives of no kind and "that it is in no sense criticism of the present Administration." To the contrary, he said, "we find much that is of value in that."

By this time the usually staid convention was in an uproar. Banging his gavel, Green recognized William J. McHorley, of Cleveland, representing the Wood, Wire and Lath Workers, who offered an amendment to the report to shunt it back to the executive council.

"Vote" cried the delegates and the proposal carried by an overwhelming vote.

To Stop Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation's got you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey—it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, eat crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran contains both "bulk" and the intestinal tonic, vitamin B. And it's not a drug, not a medicine!

Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

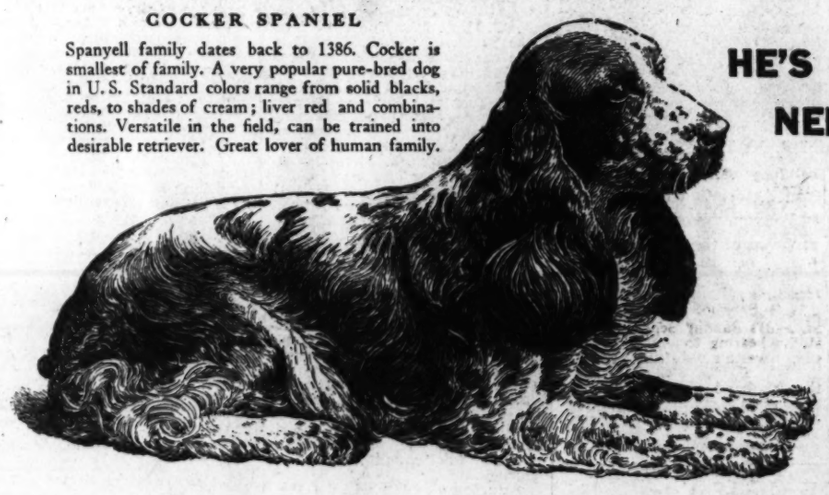
THERE'S NO POINT IN LETTING NERVES GET FRAYED!

COCKER SPANIEL

Spanyell family dates back to 1386. Cocker is smallest of family. A very popular pure-bred dog in U. S. Standard colors range from solid blacks, reds, to shades of cream; liver red and combinations. Versatile in the field, can be trained into desirable retriever. Great lover of human family.



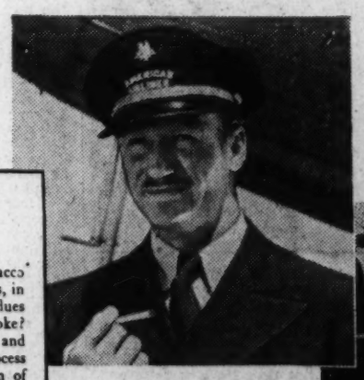
HE'S GIVING HIS NERVES A REST

AND SO IS HE

HAVE you noticed how a dog, in the midst of play, suddenly stops and rests? His nerve system—as complicated and high-strung as our own—has signalled that it's time to relax! Man, unfortunately, is less sensitive to the warnings of his nerves. Though nerves may need a restful pause, we are inclined to press on in our absorbing tasks—relentlessly—forgetful of mounting nerve strain. When we find ourselves tense, irritable, upset, we may not even realize why. Don't let tension tie your nerves in a knot. Make it your pleasant rule to break nerve tension often through the day—TO LET UP—LIGHT UP A CAMEL! Feel how gratefully nerves welcome the mellow intermission that your nearby package of Camels suggests. And not only do smokers find Camel's costlier tobaccos soothing to the nerves—but milder, too—ripe-rich in flavor—completely enjoyable from every angle!

Millions of people who live happily
LET UP—LIGHT UP A CAMEL

FLAGSHIP PILOT, Captain Walter J. Hunter of American Airlines, speaks for his profession when he says: "Ragged nerves and flying don't mix. I head off nerve tension by giving my nerves regular rests—I let up and light up a Camel. I find Camels soothing to the nerves. Camels set a new record with me for true smoking enjoyment."



"RUSH ASSIGNMENTS, deadlines, phone calls would wreck my nerves," says New York newspaper woman Estelle Karon, "if I didn't pause frequently. I let up often and light up a Camel. Camels soothe my nerves. I work better—get more fun."

DID YOU KNOW:

—that the grower of tobacco also cures it—in many cases, in barns equipped with metal flues that apply heat without smoke? That the planter works day and night until the curing process is completed? The selection of Camel's tobaccos requires the services of men familiar with every phase of growing, curing, and aging choice tobacco. It is a well-known fact in the tobacco trade that Camel cigarettes are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: One of the prime New Dealers uses saccharin in his coffee—and keeps a box of candy in his desk . . . If you see a man drink a cocktail at noon it's fairly certain he's no New Dealer . . . Despite rumors to the contrary, Jimmy Roosevelt is due back at the White House by Thanksgiving. When this column began to talk about the spy menace a year ago (Spies in White Ties) some thought I was spoofing. But no one thinks FDR is spoofing now!

Mrs. Biddle . . . on the phone

Of the eight Supreme Court justices, the most recent appointee, Justice Stanley Reed, is least withdrawn from contact with his fellow men. He hasn't let the toga become a hermit's robe. Justice Harlan Stone also gets around a bit.

Most withdrawn of all the justices is Justice Hugo Black, who has almost taken the veil.

Some of the Republican powers in the background think the way to unsaddle the New Dealers is to offer the "underprivileged one-third" more than the Democrats offer or can deliver. One influential and ambitious young Republican advocates a modified form of the California "ham and eggs" plan, on a national scale, even with the 2-cent a week stamp tax, as the solution.

But, he argues, such a plan must be operated by financial experts, not by amateurs. He thinks the "underprivileged one-third" would not object to returning to office even the most pronounced of the so-called "economic royalists"—if they'd get the ham and eggs distributed.

• • • •

Some of Washington's best minds are concentrating on the surplus cotton problem. One of them suggests that if American shirts were made with longer shirt-tails, like French shirts, it would help . . . Another proposes a padded cell for every home, which would almost dispose of the 25,000,000 bales. "It would be useful," he says, "at tax time and around the first of each month."

• • • •

POTOMAC PARADE: So many businessmen are crowding the new wages and hours office with offers of co-operation that the general effect is that of a friendly sit-down strike . . . The pall of gloom at the Spanish Embassy, emphasized by melancholy speeches by men from the loyalists' front lines, is now lifting a little . . . Tommy Corcoran's phone is often so busy that some of his friends would like to communicate with him by carrier pigeon.

Mimicry is a potent social and political asset in the Capital . . . There are scores of mimics who feel they can do an excellent take-off of FDR . . . One of the best jobs of mimicry is glamorous Evie Robert's imitation of her husband, Treasurer Chip Robert of the Democrats, phoning Ambassador "Tony" Biddle in Warsaw to ask for a $10,000 contribution to the Democratic coffers.

• • • •

Apparently Mrs. Robert heard both ends of that conversation, from an extension phone; for she performs all three roles—her husband's, the Ambassador's and that of piquant Mrs. Biddle at the other end, who was also consulted. It was a veritable Cornelia Skinner triumph.

GILT OFF THE DOME: Next year the American bourgeoisie is due to begin to sing the income tax blues in earnest—through the nose . . . An impartial, blue-blooded observer of the Washington scene rates Senator Bob LaFollette, Bill Douglas, of the SEC; Ben Cohen, Tommy Corcoran and Solicitor General Bob Jackson as the ablest of the young liberals . . . Brain Truster Cohen's conversation is so intellectual and subtle that some ordinary mortals find it difficult to follow him . . . The average well-to-do family may pay a couple of hundred dollars more income tax for 1939.

Board Hears Chain Stores Defended

Patman Bill Scored Bigger Grant Asked Andrews Is Speaker Praises Wage Law

The Washington Board of Trade, at its first fall meeting, last night heard an attack on anti-chain store legislation, an appeal for material increases in the annual Federal grant to the District, and a promise that the new wage and hour law would help District businessmen fight outside unfair trade practices.

Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the board's municipal finance committee, declared further increases in District taxation would result in retarding business activity and the future growth of the city. More than 800 persons attended the session at the Willard Hotel.

Fleming said, "the city of Washington, as the Capital of this great Nation, should be a model community.

"It's streets, parks, public buildings, and physical equipment should be as fine or finer than in any other city in the Nation. The character of the services it renders its citizens must be equal to that in other major metropolitan areas."

Calls for U. S. Aid

He said this situation could not be realized within the existing scope of business activity, unless the Federal Government materially increased its annual payment, which he said had dropped in 20 years from 50 per cent to 10 per cent of the total.

George J. Feldman, Washington attorney, warned that taxing the chain stores out of existance would clear the way for co-operatives to take their place in the distributive system, as a new competitor of independent merchants.

Feldman said the chain stores had developed because they were efficient, and represented "a partial answer to the crying need for cutting the costs of distribution."

"Mass distribution has succeeded simply because it proved adapted to the major job which all business must accomplish; that of giving the consumers of the Nation more for their money."

Hits Patman Bill

He charged that chain store taxation proposed by Representative Patman, of Texas, "immediately means chaos and intensified depression, and ultimately will probably spell the doom of the very groups which are now urging its enactment.

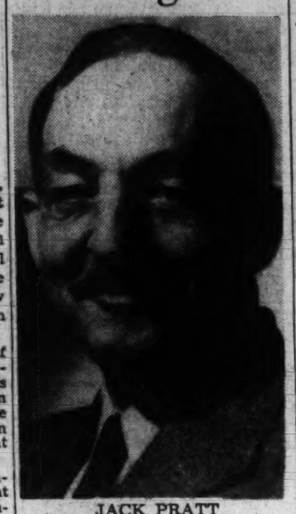
Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, declared the new law, going into effect on October 24, would help Washington business men fight unfair trade practices, by preventing cut-throat competition from firms outside the District.

The wage-hour law, he said, would not supplant the local program of the minimum wage board, but would extend the effectiveness of the local measure by its application to interstate commerce. He recalled that wage regulations in certain District industries had been undermined by competition from Maryland firms.

Explaining the District minimum wage law had served as one model for the national law, Andrews praised the work of the District wage board.

Francis Addison, jr., president of the board, praised selection of the Gravelly Point site for a new airport as a measure long supported by the group. Col. Lawrence Crawford, chairman of the board's traffic committee, asked the board to support the plan for a traffic safety council with full time executive officer.

Women's Hats Here Amaze Sourdough



JACK PRATT

Down from the frozen North—Siberia, Alaska, the Yukon—for the first time since 1900, a grizzled veteran of gold rush days took a squint at the wonders of modern civilization and declared in language more effective than eloquent:

The damnedest thing down here is women's hats."

Sixty-four-year-old Jack Pratt, known as "30-30 Jack" all along the Alaskan coast, arrived in Washington on his "first visit south of Prince Rupert" in 38 years. Prince Rupert is 500 miles north of Vancouver.

Prospector, trapper, hunter, deep-sea diver, fisherman, navigator, Government official and guide, "30-30 Jack" braved the dangers of streamlined trains and autos to visit his sister, Mrs. T. C. Coleman, of 202 Cedar street, Takoma Park.

The second automobile ride of his life; the first time he had been in a train since 1900; the first time he had ever seen a large modern city—these were some of the experiences crowding in on this bewildered twentieth century Rip van Winkle who left his native Alabama when the goggle was the glass of fashion and the bustle was the mould of form.

One of the few original Alaskan "sourdoughs" to survive into this less romantic era, Jack now lives alone in southeastern Alaska at the mouth of Anan Creek, "the greatest salmon stream in the world."

The nearest settlement is Wrangell, 60 miles away. "And last year, I didn't see a human being, siwash or white, for eight solid months," says Jack.

Jack, who was graduated from an Alabama college, studied at Columbia School of Mines, and is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, admits that "now I'm getting older, I'm becoming a little lonely."

In language freely sprinkled with seasoning from Alaska, Jack observed that he wasn't frightened by the grizzlies that abound in a game refuge near Anan, "but taxis and street cars in Washington, are too much for me." He added, "when I first arrived in Seattle, I'd take a stroll by walking around the block—you wouldn't catch me crossing any streets."

When he reached California, he bought his "first suit of clothes in 25 years—I wear buckskin at home." Asked if he intends to take his new clothes back to Anan, he replied with a grin, "no! if I take back myself, I'll be lucky."

Company Hits Crosstown Bus Plan

Fears Operating Loss Offers New Route Figures Contradicted PUC Gets Petition

Capital Transit Co. officials informed the Public Utilities Commission yesterday they could not operate profitably a crosstown bus line requested by various civic groups.

This stand was contradicted by representatives of the associations at a public hearing.

Transfers Problem

The company estimated it would cost $131,000 a year to operate the proposed line, as compared with $63,000 required to operate two present lines in the area. Locke said the company would not receive any additional revenue in the operation of the new crosstown service, since most of the passengers would be transfer customers.

The proposed route would begin at Westmoreland Circle, along Yuma street, where the bus would meet the present Bureau of Standards line, which would be eliminated, down Tilden street, through Mount Pleasant, where the bus would take the place of the Nineteenth street loop, then by Soldiers' home on the south, substituting for the Park road bus, finally linking with the Rhode Island bus line to Bladensburg road.

As proposed by the citizens' groups the bus line would follow the route from Westmoreland Circle to Tenley Circle, at Nebraska and Wisconsin avenues, where it would pick up the Bureau of Standards line over to Van Ness street and Reno road, down Reno road into Rock Creek Park by way of Porter street, meeting the Park road bus line to Catholic University, then on Michigan avenue to Rhode Island avenue by way of Monroe street and South Dakota avenue.

The Federation of Citizens' Associations, represented by its president, L. A. Carruthers, voiced approval of the proposed cross-town service.

Urges Operation at Loss

"The company is certainly under obligation to furnish the citizens this service even though it may not be fully self-sustaining," he declared.

Spokesmen for the Mount Pleasant Citizens' Association told the commission they are opposed to the route suggested by the company, which they said would seriously interfere with present service in the community.

L. G. Schmidt, superintendent of St. Paul's Sunday School, appeared at the hearing to tell the commission it was his belief the attendance in the Sunday school and the church would profit by a crosstown service.

10,000 Present Petition

A petition containing 10,000 signatures was presented to the commission by Barnum Levitan, of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association approving the bus service.

The Westmoreland Citizens' Association, represented by E. R. Ford, registered objection to the proposed line because it would be necessary to transfer to another bus or street car to reach a destination downtown.

It was understood the commission would not change the present Massachusetts avenue line. The commission was informed the American University authorities were favorable to the plan.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the commission, said the matter would be studied further by the commission.

Three-Alarm Blaze at National Press Building

Gas mask squads were active yesterday evening when 18 companies responded following repeated alarms made necessary when firemen encountered difficulty locating a blaze that started in the sub-basement of the National Press Building, Fourteenth and F streets northwest. Smoke poured from the windows of the pharmacy on street level, while a crowd estimated at 2,000 gathered in the streets

Rush-Hour Crowd Sees F Street Fire

30 Flee Pharmacy Smoke Veils Throng Firemen Choked Movie Interrupted

A hundred firemen last night battled a three-alarm blaze that raged a half hour in the basement of the National Press Building, poured thick black smoke through the National Press Pharmacy and temporarily halted the Capitol Theater show.

Ten employes and 20 customers were driven from the pharmacy and a crowd of 2,000 quickly gathered. Traffic was halted and piled up for blocks around, requiring 50 policemen, under Lieut. Frank Riley, of the Traffic Bureau, and all motorcycle men on duty more than an hour to untangle.

Some Leave Theater

No estimates of the damage were immediately available. Storage rooms for the pharmacy and the Press Cafeteria and fountain equipment were under the tons of water poured into the basement.

The Capitol Theater was filled to its 3,400 capacity when smoke seeped in. Lights were turned up and Fireman Barney Ewers, of Truck Company No. 7, on duty backstage, calmly announced there was a fire next door but no cause for alarm. Not more than 200 persons left. The pharmacy was emptied without disorder by David Herman, assistant manager, who put $300 in the safe before leaving and spent more time ejecting an old lady who insisted on finishing her sandwich.

Students assembled for night classes at the Washington School for Secretaries on the second floor of the building just above the pharmacy leaned from the windows to watch.

The first alarm was turned in at 5:50 p. m. after Leon Dashoff, musician at the theater, noticed smoke curling into the pharmacy.

Firemen who arrived on the first alarm smashed plate glass windows of the pharmacy before finding the blaze in the sub-basement near the trash bins. Beaten back by smoke and gas, they slipped masks over their heads and went back to the heart of the fire.

Saves His Cash

Despite the dense smoke and deadly fumes, no one was overcome. Chief H. B. Barker, Seventh battalion, was given first aid at the pharmacy after the fire was subdued. The smoke, he said, was "fearful."

Albert I. Fuller, pharmacy manager, said Herbert Taylor, fountain manager, returned while smoke was billowing through the place to retrieve the fountain cash drawer and was nearly overcome.

Correspondents for newspapers all over the United States and a few foreign countries boiled from the building to cover the fire. Several well known political writers were seen hopping over fire hose, displaying press passes.

"There were more newspapermen there than firemen," said a wise-cracking policeman.

Monument Will House Receiver For 2-Way Radio Messages

The Washington Monument will house a receiving set for two-way radio communication to be inaugurated here late in 1940 by the Fire Department, it was learned yesterday.

The National Capital Parks authorities have given the District permission to utilize the space in the shaft between the spectators' platform and the top of the monument.

Already work has begun to install machinery which, in two years, will pick up mesages from automobiles—and even the old fire boat on the Potomac—for relaying to fire alarm headquarters at McMillan Park.

Under a $500,000 loan and grant to the District from the Public Works Administration the system will be ready for use by June, 1940. At this time, also, the two-way radio system will begin operation for the Fire Department, and possibly the Police Department.

A slice of the $500,000 allotment was turned over to Herbert A. Friede, superintendent of the police and fire alarm systems, for work in the two-way radio field.

Of course, there's always a danger that once the system begins operation, one of the hundreds of thousands of tourists who visit the Monument might take a notion to inspect the receiving set. He says it would take but a snip of a wire to throw the entire system out.

"We will have the guards there, and it will be very difficult for anyone to reach the spot anyway," he declared.

The sets will be installed in the fire boat; the car of the chief engineer, fire marshall, two emergency cars, deputy chief, superintendent of machinery and superintendent of the alarm system.

The police calls and the fire calls will be broadcast on the same wave band. According to the rules of the Federal Communications Commission only one frequency in the ultra high brackets is allowed to a city.

"We don't expect to have any trouble in this respect," Friede explained. "Of course, we may have to put a message on the air in a hurry, but police calls take only a few seconds. Another thing is we don't have to repeat a message three times as do the police. In two-way conversations the message is made the first time and if the other party doesn't answer, he's just not there."

Meanwhile, bids for the first unit of the new fire alarm headquarters will be opened at the District Building Monday. The bids are for underground conduits. Next in line is the building to house the system. It is expected the commissioners will shortly advertise for bids. Work, according to the contract with the PWA, must begin before January 1, and be completed by June, 1940.

The present fire alarm system which is housed on the fifth floor of the District Building will be in operation up to the very last minute. When the new system is ready to operate, the one in the District Building will be closed.

Friede said some parts of the present system might be used in the new system. In these cases the new parts will be rented and replaced by the present pieces.

It was understood Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the police, is anxious to install two-way radio sets for his scout cars, and it may be possible to have them in readiness by the time the fire alarm system is ready for operation.

Couple Tumbles Into Street From Moving Truck

Rushing to their aid, onlookers learned they were Paul Klaassen, 43, and his wife, Arah, both of 14 Girard street northwest. They were taken to Sibley Hospital, where Klaassen was found to have injuries of the pelvis, and his wife a bruised hip.

Police said the couple was riding beside a son, Paul, jr., 19, who was driving. On a curve the door was jarred open.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury exonerated William E. Morris, 45, of 5107 Eighth street northwest, in the traffic death of James Braxton, colored, 17 months, of 717 Pleasant court southwest. The child died in Providence Hospital after being run over by Harris' truck, which was backing from an alley.

Takoma Park Presbyterians Celebrate Jubilee of Church

Takoma Park Presbyterian Church last night echoed with memories, as more than 400 parishioners gathered in the parish hall for the golden jubilee dinner and reception.

Highlighting the program was the presence of the first pastor of the organized church, Dr. John Van Ness, and his wife, as well as three of the four charter members still on the church roll. They are Mr. E. E. Blodgett, Miss Laura E. Skinner and Frank E. Skinner. Mrs. Bertha Page Weedon, the other member, is in Florida. Mrs. Dorothy Skinner Walsh, daughter of Mr. Skinner, contributed vocal solos.

Introduced by Dr. J. A. La Clerc, toastmaster, Dr. Van Ness, now retired and a resident of Narberth, Pa., congratulated the congregation on its achievements over a half a century, adding that "I hope the next 50 years will find even greater achievements for this church."

In a reminiscent mood, he described the early days of the congregation, from 1895 to 1902, during his pastorate, when, he said, Takoma had a population of several hundred persons, 41 of them enrolled in his congregation. In those seven years, he pointed out, the church grew from a mission to a self-supporting church, which financed the erection of a parsonage for him and his bride.

Following the address, films of the church school in action were shown, after which the movie screen was rolled up, revealing a bronze cross and altar, an anniversary gift presented to the church by Dr. R. Whitaker in memory of his wife.

Later, brief talks were given by Lindley Dennis, Homer J. Smith and the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor since 1929, six years after the erection of the present stone building. His predecessors, in addition to Dr Van Ness, were Drs. Arthur M. Little, William Hart Dexter and Thomas C. Clark.

Committee chairman for the anniversary celebration were H. A. A. Smith, general chairman; Col. Louis B. Bender, program; H. H. Hulbert, finance, and R. G. Sherburne, building sketch. The dinner was prepared by women of the church under Mrs. Charles L. Mills, and served by a mens' committee headed by Hugh Paull.

Lawyer Arrested In Balking Seizure Of Car for Taxes

Accused of resisting Federal agents who were attempting to seize his automobile for alleged non-payment of income taxes, B. Alexander Singer, local patent attorney, was ordered held under bond of $2,500 yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Earlier, Internal Revenue Agent Everett H. Kuebler and Deputy Tax Collector Jackson W. Maslin went to the Shoreham, where Singer lives. They placed internal revenue stamps on his car.

Singer appeared, however, and grabbed the keys from the dashboard, according to testimony.

John R. Cox, internal revenue agent in charge of this district, reported Singer, in the last six years, has filed returns showing a net profit of approximately $8,000, but has failed to make tax payments. The unpaid tax, said Cox, is in excess of $5,000.

Capra Comes to Town In Behalf of 'Mr. Deeds'

Is Studying Background of New Film 'Knickerbocker Holiday' Being Perfected Jottings of the Theater World

FRANK CAPRA, Columbia's ace director, who won two Academy awards with "It Happened One Night" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," was responsible for the screen version of "You Can't Take It With You," current at the Earle and outstripping all of its predecessors in box-office appeal, is a busy young man on his first visit to the National Capital in some six or eight years. Although he arrived in Washington as recently as last Monday midnight, he already has seen the Supreme Court Building, attended a White House press conference, enjoyed some hearty laughs at the Shoreham's floor show, yesterday entertained the drama desks at an informal two-hour-and-a-half confab and luncheon at the Mayflower, last night attended the final Baltimore performance of Robert E. Sherwood's new play of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and at the first opportunity will see the Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical comedy, "Knickerbocker Holiday," at the National.

BELL.

Between times, he is doing a little quiet research work on his next picture, which will further celebrate the unique character and achievements of Mr. Deeds, this time with a Washington background. A camera crew is joining Mr. Capra here on Saturday to make necessary "background shots" while the leaves are still on the trees. If Gary Cooper can be enticed away from the Goldwyn lot to perpetuate the solid characterization he created for "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the new picture will be called "Mr. Deeds Goes to Washington.' If someone else, perforce, has to portray the role, the film will be titled, "The Gentleman from Montana." It is not, under any circumstances, to be a partisan political document, but a human interest drama after the manner of the original "Mr. Deeds."

It requires a full half-minute's conversation with Mr. Capra to discern why his screen plays, year in and year out, rank at the top of the critical and lay ratings. He exercises extreme care in the selection of his stories and then devotes painstaking thought and persistent effort to getting something more into his pictures than the mere superficialities of the given script. His pictures have to be right, even in the eyes of those who know most about the subject of which he is treating.

For example, Capra perceives in the labor war now going on in this country something more than a mere scramble for power. He senses it as a conflict between two diametrically opposed theories of development. While he has no known intention of making a labor picture, one feels that if he should, it would reflect a sound estimate of the value to society of a total equality of labor as opposed to the view that there never can be a complete equality of skilled and unskilled workers in any field.

Again, if the newspaper profession should play any part in his new "Mr. Deeds" picture, one gets a very definite impression that the color of politics that is reflected in every branch of the craft in the National Capital would be sensed on the screen through thoughtful consideration of the varying methods of approach as among the news reporters, the correspondents, the political commentators and the columnists. It is even possible that Mr. Capra might be so optimistic as to contemplate a newspaper character in his play that might be authentically represented in at least one scene otherwise than as perpetually crocked! The man has a fine faculty for getting to the bottom of things.

Through him, his pictures possess the same virtue. That is what you learn in that half-minute's conversation. In two hours and a half, you learn a great deal more that will be taken up at another time.

Mr. Capra is accompanied on his present junket by Sidney R. Buchman, scenarist, who will do the new script. Mr. Buchman is a veteran of the theater and already has many notable works to his credit, including, either individually or in collaboration, such memorable productions as "If I Had a Million," "The Sign of the Cross," "Broadway Bill," "The King Steps Out," "Theodora Goes Wild" and numerous others. There isn't very much that can go askew with the new flicker with these two working on it.

Those who may have thought they were viewing a seasoned production when the new Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical comedy, "Knickerbocker Holiday" opened its week's engagement in the National Monday night—it had had its premiere in Hartford and played the greater part of a fortnight in Boston—should be apprised that there were present on that occasion many of the uncertainties of a "first night."

An entire new scene has been written into the first act and was being played for the first time here—which necessarily retarded the early tempo of the piece. Likewise, a new song had been added to the score—"There Is Nowhere to Go But Up," in the same act—and that, too, was being sung for the first time.

Tuesday night's performance ran more smoothly and at a considerably accelerated pace—and to a proportionately more enthusiastic audience, which exceeded the first night's in size. The first-nighters accorded Walter Huston and his supporting players eight curtain calls at the end of the last act, at that.

• • • •

In addition to Maxwell Anderson, who was not in Washington for the opening of Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" last week—the Playwrights' Producing Company was represented at the National Tuesday night by Mr. Sherwood and Elmer Rice, who came over from Baltimore to "sit in" in the new musical. Both were highly pleased by what they saw and reported that "Abe Lincoln" had received a greater ovation in Baltimore on opening night than it had here a week before. The Baltimoreans, it seems, all but tore down the house in their demonstration over the power of the play. So on it went to New York last night for Saturday's opening at the Plymouth Theater. We shall see, now, how smart New York really is.

• • • •

For the first time since goodness knows when, a headline act has failed to complete its week's engagement on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater. Eddie Garr, one presumes for some good and sufficient reason, no longer is on the bill. With Fred Sanborn and the Soprano Miss Shepard still on the program, there are still two headliners left.

Young Love Has Its Doubts

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 12.—There's no foundation for the rumor that Ritz Brothers will split up into separate units. They've been inseparable since leaving that Brooklyn high school 13 years ago. And to make certain they'll stay together till death do us part, they've had their new contract made out just that way.

HEDDA HOPPER

On the walls of the Cafe of All Nations on Twentieth Century lot are painted photographs of all their players—painted according to their box-office rating. Shirley Temple's head is the largest. When a player passes on, or option day lapses, his face is rubbed out and another takes its place. June Lang's spot will soon be vacant. There is your success or failure, where everyone can see it. Interesting but terrifying.

I doubt if Bob Montgomery will leave his farm in Connecticut for the lead opposite Eleanor Powell in that hoodoo picture, "Honolulu." Three leading men right here in town have turned it down.

Bette Davis never lets an old friend down. Actor Stephen Draper, from New England, couldn't find a job here, so took a fish and hamburger place three toad hops from Universal Studios. At his opening, Bette not only sent flowers but brought eight guests. Hope Stephen succeeds. I love people who get out and dig instead of sitting home weeping about their bad luck.

The Basil Rathbones are bringing a race horse back from New York next week—no, not with them in their drawing room. It was given them by the Ral Parrs in Baltimore, Md. Can you picture the blanket that horse will wear at Ouida's coming out party for it?

Otto Kruger, who sails for England on the 10th to do "Black Eyes," felt sure picture would be called off. Not at all. During Hitler heat wave, he received following cable: "Regardless of international complications, you will kindly report to the studio on October 30." Which shows what British can do when they make up their minds to it.

Anita Louise can't confirm or deny the rumor that her mother is going to have another baby, because her mother rises above those questions when answering Anita's letters. Incidentally, after preview of "The Sisters," Anita had offers from two major studios, because she gave best performance of her whole life.

Director William Dieterle got a note from Eddie Mattison, former inmate of San Quentin, begging for the job of making all crown jewels for "Jaurez." He wrote: "If you let me do it, no one will ever know my stones are imitation."

Which reminds me of Lawrence Tibbett's recent concert when the audience begged for another encore. "Sorry," cracked Larry. "I'd give the Jewel Song from 'Faust,' but alas, all our jewels have been stolen."

Davey Rowen, former fighter, who gets a bit punch drunk at times, barged up to Clarence Brown at Metro the other day and said: "How about giving me one of the Idjjiots in "Idiot's Delight," pal? I'm plum out ofa job."

Director Mitch Leisen will remember his birthday. The party started at breakfast when four telegraph boys got him to his front door, then ran like mad down the street, when up drove a horrible wreck of a town car, with Mitch's initials, 2 feet high, on the door. Chauffeur and footman in immaculate livery.

When the footman stepped down from driver's seat, he was wearing a pair of bathing trunks and riding boots. Chauffeur wore only long wolen underdrawers with his jacket. The interior of his car had all the comforts of home, including poison ivy, and packed to the ceiling with surprise packages—all gags.

Famous Satire Brings Cohan To National

Stars in Hit Revue Harpoons New Deal Other New Bills

George M. Cohan in "I'd Rather Be Right" will be the attraction at the National Theater next week, beginning Monday night. Written by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, with music and lyrics by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, "I'd Rather Be Right" has been acclaimed as such a thorough—even if good-natured—razzing of the New Deal that there is nothing left for the Gridiron Club and the Republicans to do. Mr. Cohan appears in the role of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, which he plays without an offensive touch and with great kindliness. His is a miraculous performance. Surrounding him are other noted players who impersonate members of the President's Cabinet, the Supreme Court Justices and other Government functionaries. Included in the cast are Taylor Holmes, Marion Green, Bijou Fernandez, Joseph Allen, Paul Parke, Margaret Sande and scores more. Matinees will be given, as usual, on Wednesday and Saturday.

"Too Hot to Handle," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's story of the adventures of a newsreel cameraman, costarring Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Supporting the stars are Walter Pidgeon, Walter Connolly and Leo Carrillo, with many others in lesser roles. The story is a cyclonic one, embracing all manner of exciting incidents which might engage the interest of a newsreel photographer in quest of thrills and scoops. A strong vein of romance also runs through the action. Truman Talley's "Fashion Forecast," in Technicolor, with famous models as mannequins, and Pete Smith's "Gridiron Rules" will be secondary features of the bill.

Edward G. Robinson, supported by Wendy Barrie, Otto Kruger, John Beal and Barbara O'Neill, will be pictured at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in Columbia's production of "I Am the Law." In this subject, Mr. Robinson appears in the role of a law professor who gives up a vacation trip to Europe to prosecute a gang of racketeers in which several ostensibly respectable citizens are involved. The film is akin to "Racket Busters" and "Big City." The stage portion of the new bill at the Earle will be headlined by Jan Garber and His Orchestra, one of the most popular organizations visiting the Capital. Garber is bringing all of his stage and radio specialists with him.

Deanna Durbin, one of the cinema's outstanding stars at 15, will be seen on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning today, in "That Certain Age," her fourth successive hit. In this gay romance of youth and middle age, Deanna reveals a new facet of her maturing artistry and sings in beautiful voice. Her supporting players include Melvyn Douglas, John Halliday, Irene Rich, Nancy Carroll, Jackie Cooper, Jackie Searl and dozens more. Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, "Brave Little Tailor," is being continued with the new feature.

The Dionne Quintuplets are scheduled to be revealed as real entertainers on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when their latest picture, "Five of a Kind," will be the principal attraction. In this subject the five youngsters sing, dance and "act" like grown-up troupers—or almost. The cast featured in the fabulous babies' support includes Jean Hersholt, in his familiar role of "Dr. Dafoe;" Claire Trevor, Cesar Romero, Slim Summerville, Henry Wilcoxon, Inez Courtney, John Whalen, Jane Darwin and Pauline Moore. The stage bill for the week will be headlined by Ciro Rimac and His Rhumbaland Muchachos, South America's sizzling dancing and singing group. Others to appear will include Frederick Sylvester, acrobats; Gale and Carson, comedy singers, and the Chester Hale Capitol Dancers.

As first of an impressive list of foreign screen attractions, the Little Theater will present "Life Dances On" as its chief photoplay offering for the week beginning Sunday. This French film was awarded highest honors at the Vienna Exposition in 1937 and stars Harry Baur and Marie Bell, who is being seen for the first time by American audiences. This highly lauded picture was written and directed by Julien Duvuvier, who made "Poil de Carotte" and "The Golem." The bill will be augmented by the customary short-reel subjects.

Sonja Henie, supported by Richard Greene, Cesar Romero, Buddy Ebsen, George Barbier, Louise Hovick and a host of others, will return to the F street screen tomorrow in "My Lucky Star," announced as chief feature for the new week at the Columbia Theater. In this story of a skating fashion model, detailed to a coeducational college, Miss Henie does the most spectacular skating she has so far brought to the silver sheet. The "Alice in Wonderland" finale of the picture is a creation of magnificent beauty in action. Short-reel subjects will round out the program.

Beginning today at the Belasco Theater the chief feature of the new screen bill will be "Grand Illusion," the distinguished film depicting life in a German concentration camp. One of the principal roles is played by Eric Von Stroheim, absent from the American screen for many months. This picture comes to Washington with the indorsement of many noted people and organizations and already has been previewed by distinguished official and sectarian audiences in the Capital.

"The Birth of a Baby," one of the most controversial films ever made—and one of the most laudable in underlying purpose—now is in its second week on the screen at the Rialto Theater. Dealing with the care of mothers during pregnancy and in childbirth, as well as of the babies after birth, this is an educational picture rather than screen "entertainment" in the usual sense. Patrons under 16 years of age are not admitted unless accompanied by adults.

"Football Giants," a travelogue to the Bermudas in natural colors, a "Color Rhapsody," "The Frog Pond," and a novelty reel, "Find What's Wrong," will be the featured short subjects on the new bill opening tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. The program, as usual, will be based on newsreel coverage of the world.

The Warner Brothers' production of 'Four Daughters," featuring Claude Rains, Lola, Priscilla and Rosemary Lane, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield and May Robson, will continue the major attractions at the Metropolitan Theater, at least through today. It will be followed by another notable film, the identity of which will be disclosed by the management at a later date.

"Bozo" Snyder and his own company of burlesque and vaudeville specialists will make their first visit of the season to the Gayety Theater next week, opening with the customary Sunday matinee. "Bozo," it will be remembered, is the silent clown who never utters a word on the stage, but achieves greater comedy effects in pantomime than a majority of his articulate contemporaries are able to manage. He will be supported by Valerie Parks, one of the more disturbing of the disrobers; Tommy Raft, Edith Walton, Lou Browne, Margie Bartel, Jack O'Malley, Harry Seymour and a beauty chorus.

Two-year-old Donald M. McCathran, 3033 Sixteenth street northwest, was seriously injured yesterday by a hit-and-run driver in a car with Virginia tags.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 12.

HERVEY ALLEN, author of "Anthony Adverse," returned to New York yesterday after a trip through Florida, Bermuda, the Bahamas and San Salvador . . . He had rushed to Florida to protect his property when he heard that a hurricane was due to strike there . . . In San Salvador the board of development learned that Allen had composed long poems about the discoverers. And so, as a Columbus Day gesture of appreciation—title to take effect October 12—they presented to Allen five acres of the sacred ground on which Columbus first landed.

AT THE ST. JAMES Theater, Maurice Evans' uncut version of "Hamlet" will be presented. The curtain is scheduled to rise at 6:30 p. m., and the audience will be allowed time out for dinner . . . Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" was the last show to be presented this way. Horace Liveright, the publisher, was the guest of Otto Kahn, the banker, and arrived wearing a tuxedo. He noticed that Kahn wore a cut-away . . . At the dinner intermission Liveright rushed home and swapped his tuxedo for a cut-away. He returned to the theater in time for the resumption of the play, and saw Kahn—who had changed to a tuxedo.

SIDNEY KINGSLEY and the I. L. G. W. U.'s Labor Stage—which was to produce his dramatization of Millen Brand's "The Outward Room"—have come to an amicable parting. Kingsley has regained the production rights to the play . . . The owner of a Fifty-second street swing spot can't get into the place. He's threatening to open another club nearby and use the same name . . . Milton Blow, who owns Station WNEW, probably will be the next owner of WINS . . . Jimmy Donohue, who returned to America yesterday, still must keep away from all cafes . . . Sally Rand arrived here yesterday and immediately flew to Hollywood to defend a suit.

ALEC WOOLLCOTT wired Harpo Marx last night inviting him to their Vermont island. "The autumn color can't last," was Woollcott's message, "and neither can I" . . . Once, in response to such a message, Harpo borrowed a decrepit car from Ben Hecht and drove to Vermont. Woollcott studied the ramshackle contraption and asked: "What is this?" . . . "No cracks, now," Harpo replied. "That's my town car" . . . "Yes," answered Woollcott, "and the town is Pompeii."

AFTER JACK DOYLE'S face was slapped by Eleanor Troy at "The Midnight Sun," Doyle rushed to the Kit Kat Klub, where he later was met and consoled by Michi Taki, the N. T. G. showgirl. Doyle didn't find peace for long. For into the room marched Cynthia Cavanaugh, his favorite of last year, and Mary Bicks and Mae Martin, whom he had escorted Sunday night. The distraught Doyle called it quits and rushed home . . . Hazel Scott has joined the LeMirage show, which will feature Raymond Scott's quintette . . . Sophie Tucker will broadcast for Lucky Strikes . . . Dixie Davis now is being secreted in the West Point vicinity.

TWO WEEKS AGO Jack Warner, jr., was in Copenhagen and cabled his father asking for more money with which to tour Europe . . . "Come right home," the film official replied. "What do you think I am—the mint?" . . . The youngster sailed on the Kungsholm the next day. After three days at sea his father sent a wireless to him: "Am sailing to Europe. Stay there and will join you" . . . "I'm on the high seas," the lad radioed in reply. "What do you think I am—a fish?"

FRANK SHIELDS, who was in that El Morocco slugfest last week, is worried about his right hand. The knuckles were cut open when his punch landed, and it may affect his tennis . . . Julia Donohue Higgins has returned to her family's apartment and will leave for Hollywood . . . Eddie de Lange, the band leader, won a $50 bet last night. He had wagered that he could shave one side of his mustache and nobody would notice it in two weeks. Nobody did . . . A Harvard prodigy, who had been graduated at 13, is suing a local magazine for writing about him in its "Where Are They Now?" department. His charge is that he's legally entitled to his privacy.

Dr. Studebaker Broadcast Set

Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, will speak on "John Hay, Man of Peace and Democracy" at 7:45 p. m. Saturday over a Nation-wide radio broadcast arranged by B'nai B'rith, Jewish philanthropic and educational organization. The broadcast will be part of a country-wide celebration of the centennial of John Hay, Secretary of State under Presidents McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

Plan First Aid Classes

Kindler Appeals For Rotary's Aid

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, yesterday appealed to the Rotary Club at its luncheon in the Willard Hotel to support concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra to make the orchestra of greater value to the community.

Dr. William CcClelland, president of the Potomac Power Co., told the club that Dr. Kindler had almost single-handed lifted the orchestra to its present high caliber.

The program was under direction of "old-timers." John Dolph, first president of the club, 1912-1914, presided. Others taking part were George W. Harris, president from 1915 to 1916, and Dan Callahan, from 1916 to 1917. Minutes of a meeting in 1912 were read.

Converts League Will Hear Bishop

The Most Rev. Duane Hunt, bishop of Salt Lake City, will speak on "The Joy of Certainty" at a meeting sponsored by the Converts League, Catholic Daughters of America, at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow at the Willard Hotel.

The Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, is to talk on "Current Affairs." Other speakers include Dr. A. J. Burggraff, president of St. Paul's College, and Miss Josephine Walsh, grand regent of the league. Miss Florence E. Winter, national chairman, will preside. A musical program will include solos by John McMahon, under direction of Dr. Malton Boyce, of St. Matthews Church.

The reception committee will be in charge of Miss Augusta E. Uhl, territorial deputy; Mrs. Anna J. Uhl and Miss Anne Doyle, assisted by the Convert League committee.

Absentee Voters Aided

The Democratic National Committee's Absentee Voters' Bureau, 1406 G street northwest, will be open daily except Sunday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. from now until November 8. The bureau supplies free notarial service, and also information about voting in all States.

20 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. Pete Marshall, who has been on the business end of press box telegraph wires for 50 years, man and boy, flung down the newspaper he had been reading and delivered a derisive snort:

"Humph," said Mr. Marshall, emphasizing his new-found disgust by sending the cuspidor wobbling drunkenly under the impact of a well-aimed load of rich, brown fluid that had been the fruit of Mr. Marshall's favorite tobacco leaf.

POVICH.

Apparently Mr. Marshall didn't think the 1938 Yankees were the greatest team in baseball history, and why not?

"Why not? Are you crazy? Tell me one reason why they are. Just because the Yanks win a world series in four straight, people go off their nuts about 'em. Who did the Yankees lick in that world series last week?"

The Chicago Cubs.

They Sneaked In!

"Yeah, the Cubs. That's what I mean, they didn't lick anybody to speak of. How did the Cubs get into the series anyway? They sneaked in, that's how. They couldn't hit and they just outgamed a lot of stumbling National League clubs in the stretch. The Yankees beat a club like that and people begin to call 'em the greatest club in history. Humph."

So saying, Mr. Marshall leaned back, looked over his shoulder, and eyed the brass gaboon ominously. S'help up if the thing didn't sprout a pair of legs and scamper around out of range.

"Where was I?" demanded Old Pete. "We were talking about the Yankees wern't we? Well, I'll tell you another thing. These Yankees who licked the Cubs in four straight can't hold a candle to the 1913 A's ball club. And the 1927 Yankees would have murdered 'em like they murdered the Cubs last week."

I'll Eat It!

Izzatso?

"Yes, 'at's so. The people who are calling these 1938 Yankees a great ball club don't know a baseball from a bass viol. Look at the figures. Only three men on the team hitting above .300. Only one outfielder hitting more than .300. And the team batting only .274. If that's a great baseball team, I'll eat it."

So you like the 1927 Yankees.

"Sure I like the 1927 Yankees. You have to like 'em. Now there was a ball team. They won the series in four straight games, too, don't forget that! And they didn't knock over a lot of setups like the Cubs. They beat a pretty good team when they beat the 1927 Pirates. They beat a club that had the Waner boys and Pie Traynor and Glenn Wright. And the Pirates had some pretty fair pitchers in Vic Aldrige and Lee Meadows and Kremer and Yde and Miljus."

Old Pete said that those '27 Pirates could have licked the '38 Cubs, perhaps in four straight. "But let's leave the National League out of this," he resumed. "Take these 1938 Yankees and compare 'em to the '27 Yanks. Take 'em one by one."

Remember Mr. Ruth

All right.

"Lookit those outfields. Why, they wouldn't let that 1938 outfield in the same park with that 1927 outfield. Whoever heard of a great ball team having only one .300 hitter in its outfield? But that's what you find on the Yanks this year. The only Yankee outfielder that could have made that 1927 team is Joe DiMaggio."

He's a pretty good ball player, probably the best in the league.

"Sure he's a good ball player, but don't forget we're talking about the Yankees of 1927. The people who are going around saying DiMaggio is a better ball player than Ruth had better not include 1927. The Ruth of that season hit 60 home runs don't forget. And he batted .356, don't forget. What did DiMaggio hit this year?"

Three twenty-four.

"Well, then. But lok at those other guys in the Yanks' 1938 outfield. Henrich and Selkirk. A .269 hitter and a .254 hitter. They couldn't carry bats for the '27 Yankees! Did you ever hear of Earl Combs, who hit .356 in 1927, and a fellow named Bob Meusel, who batted .337? They were a murderers row."

How about the two infields?

Gehrig Was Going!

"How about 'em? The less said about 'em the better for the 1938 Yanks. Back in '27, Lou Gehrig wasn't a .295 hitter. He was socking that ball for a cool .375 and he was a lot more spry around that bag. Tony Lazzeri was a .309 hitter at second base and as good a fielder as Joe Gordon who hit only .257 this year. Mark Koenig could always outhit Frankie Crosetti and he had a better arm."

Red Rolfe hit .311 this year.

"All right, all right. But Joe Dugan was a better third baseman with his .269 average than Rolfe is with his .311. There's no argument there. I'll give the 1938 Yankees a big edge in the catching because the Yanks didn't have a catcher who was worth his salt in '27, and Bill Dickey is one of my favorite ball players."

The '27 Yanks didn't have any Ruffing or any Gomez.

"No, but they had Waite Hoyt who won 22 and lost 7 last year, and Herb Pennock who won 19 and lost 8, and Urban Shocker who won 18 and lost 6, and Wilcey Moore who won 19 and lost 7. And George Pipgras and Dutch Reuther. Don't bring up the pitching if you like these '38 Yankees. You'll just lose another argument!"

Wood's Injured Leg Better; Navy Star May Face Yale

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12.—Emmett Wood, the chunky, but fleet Middy who is the Navy's outstanding ball carrier so far this season and who suffered a leg injury in the Virginia game, has improved sufficiently as to indicate his presence in the Yale game Saturday at New Haven.

Wood may not start, but he is

School Court Series Plan Is Changed

2-Day Play-Off Set 4-Top Fives to Vie Act to Help Interest Kupka New Coach

Because of the increased number of high school basketball teams in competition for the schoolboy court crown and the danger of another season being a complete walkaway for one particular team, the Department of Health and Physical Education has released an entirely different sort of schedule for the 1939 season.

In the coming campaign, and for some years to come if the change is found advisable, teams seeking the high school court title will not only have to amass a creditable rating in the four weeks of the regular season, but will have to go through a two-day tournament at the end of that time to win the series.

As it stands, there are seven teams entered for the coming season; Anacostia, an addition this year; Woodrow Wilson, McKinley, Western, Central, Roosevelt and Eastern, the club which won in a breeze last season. Each team will play each of its mates in the series sometime between January 17 and February 21.

In a final attempt to draw the cash customers out and settle the court issue fairly a tournament or round-robin involving the four highest rated clubs, will be staged on February 24 and 25, the winner of two games being crowned officially as interhigh champion.

In adopting the new system—one which is used in several of the States now—the board of high school principals, with Birch Bayh, head of the Health Department, as spokesman, feel that a more accurate reckoning of the real championship material can be reached. In addition, the series should no longer be like that of 1938 when Eastern was conceded victory before the season was half over.

According to Mr. Bayh, the tournament held at the end of the season will furnish a bit of "clutch" competition which an over-powering team wouldn't have otherwise. The fact that a crown will not be certain until the last days of the season should also continue to bring out customers despite a large lead acquired by Eastern or any other school.

Games, instead of being played on the McKinley floor alone, will be distributed between Eastern, Roosevelt and McKinley. Again the system of double-headers on Tuesday afternoons and Friday nights will prevail.

Another item of interest concerning the high school basketball situation was seen in the announcement by Mr. Bayh's office that Anthony Kupka will handle the court squad of Woodrow Wilson this year. Coach Carl Heintel, last year's mentor of the President's will confine his duties to football in the future. Kupka was coach of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High for several years, where he gained prominence.

Whizzer Tops Max Krause

Takes League Honors Gained 216 Yards Nine More Than Max

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 12.—Byron "Whizzer" White, Colorado University's All-American ace now playing for the Pittsburgh Pirates, has taken the lead in ground gaining honors in the National Football League, statistics released today.

The Whizzer has gained 216 yards, nine more than Max Krause, of the Washington Redskins, who dropped out of lead for the first time this season Sunday. Scrapper Farrell, Pirates' ace sold to Brooklyn this week, is third with 176 yards.

A two-way tie still exists for scoring honors between Joe Carter, Philadelphia end, and Don Hutson, also an end from the Green Bay Packers. Each has counted 24 points. Ward Cuff, of the Giants, and Ralph Kercheval, of Brooklyn, each kicked another field goal last Sunday to remain in first place in that department with three successful placements apiece.

Ed Danowski is firmly entrenched in first place for aerial honors. He has completed 36 out of 61 passes for 438 yards. Gaynell Tinsley, Chicago Cardinals' end, heads the list in number of catches with 18.

Navy Soccer Team Victor

Beats Lafayette, 3-0 Parker Is Star Meets Army Next

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12.—In a particularly hard-fought game of soccer, with both teams playing their initial game, the Navy won this afternoon by 3 to 0 from Lafayette.

After four minutes of play, Parker scored for the Navy on a penalty kick, and the teams played in even terms until near the middle of the final quarter.

Midway in the last period, Parker kicked to the goal, the ball rebounding, from a post and Germanshausen booted it through. A minute later Parker dribbled from the middle of the field to put the ball into the net for the final score.

Absence of Wind Again Holds Up Schooners' Race

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 12 (U.P.)—Lack of wind today forced another postponement in the second race of the 1938 series for the International Fishermen's championship.

For the third time in as many days, the defending champion, Canada's Bluenose, and the American challenger, Gloucester's Gertrude L. Thebaud, tomorrow will attempt to sail the 36-mile triangular course off Gloucester within the six-hour time limit.

The first race Sunday was won by a half mile by Thebaud. The championship will go to the first schooner to win three races.

Babe Ruth Is Dropped As Coach

Pick Dressen, Killifer New Manager Is 33 Started With Yanks Is Planning Trades

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 12.—"Lippy" Leo Durocher, the out-talking-est shortstop in either major league, was signed today to manage the Brooklyn Dodgers next season, succeeding the old pitcher, Burleigh Grimes.

Durocher accepted under sad circumstances. His father, George Durocher, died Monday midnight in West Springfield, Mass., and Leo hurried here only to announce his plans before returning for the funeral tomorrow.

"If it were not for that, this would be about the happiest moment in my life," he told assembled newsmen. "Dad had always said he would live to see me a big league manager, but he didn't."

There was another unhappy feature. Babe Ruth goes out of baseball, this time probably for good. In naming his two coaches, Charlie Dressen and Bill Killifer, Durocher said the Bambino had not "been available" for a coaching job.

Babe Wants to Manage

"I can back that up," said General Manager Larry MacPhail. "The Babe was considered, along with Jimmy Wilson, but he has big league managerial aspirations. I can tell you also that he has had several chances to manage minor league teams."

The Babe, after coming out of retirement the past midseason to coach at first base for the seventh-place Dodgers, attracted bumper crowds. He and Durocher had a spat one day in the clubhouse, probably costing Ruth whatever chance he may have had to manage the team next year.

Dressen, one of the new coaches, managed the Cincinnati Reds last season. He piloted Nashville to second place in the Southern Association this year. Killifer, great catcher of other days, just finished driving his Sacramento team to victory in the Pacific Coast League playoff.

At 33, Durocher becomes the second youngest manager in the big show. Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox was 32 today.

Joined Yanks in 1928

Noted for his slick fielding and the noise he generates, Durocher broke into big league ball as a regular with the Yankees in 1928 and in 1929 under Miller Huggins. He was with Cincinnati in 1930, 1931, 1932 and until early in 1933, when he was traded to the St. Louis Cardinals.

He was one of the most wild-eyed members of the famous "Gas House Gang" in the succeeding years when the cardinals were terrifying the opposition. But during the 1937 campaign he fell out violently with Manager Frankie Frisch and was traded to Brooklyn for four players, none of whom did the Cards any good.

The Brooklyns didn't do any good, either, but for the first time in many a year they had a really good shortstop, one good enough to play with the winning National Leaguers in the All-Star game at Cincinnati.

Leo isn't ready to announce changes in his line-up yet, but he said that "Larry and I expect to do a lot of trading."

3 Washington Women Win Middle Atlantic Tournament Matches

Miss Dettweiler Beats Mrs. Meckley Mrs. Stokes Triumphs, 4 and 3 Miss Brown Victor; Semifinals Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 12.—Washington women golfers today for the second straight day dominated play in the 1938 Middle Atlantic golf championships which advanced to the semifinal round.

Out of five District of Columbia feminine golfers who teed off in the quarter-finals of the championship flight at Rodgers Forge, three emerged victorious, leaving in their wake two defeated Baltimore hopes, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow and Mrs. Jerome Sloman.

Only Mrs. M. L. Bell, Hillendale Club star, survived among the Baltimore entrants. She defeated Mrs. Myron Davy, of Congressional, 4 and 2, in a match that never seemed in doubt from the time the intercity rivals left the first tee.

Mrs. Stokes Wins

Mrs. Sloman, Suburban Club feminine ace, failed to press Mrs. W. R. Stokes, of Indian Spring, who won 4 and 3. Mrs. Morrow fell prey to the steady driving of Marion Brown, of the Manor Club, 3 and 2.

Helen Dettweiler, the medalist, who hails from Washington, led the way into the semifinal round by winning a thrilling battle from Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring. Miss Dettweiler was forced to go three extra holes to win, 1 up after 21 holes.

Miss Dettweiler repeated her medalist's mark and the course record with her 79 for 18 of the 21 holes today. Mrs. Meckley had 80. Miss Dettweiler shot beautiful long woods and irons. She chose the latter when her opponent selected woods. The winner was over the 427-yard seventh green and the 382-yard sixteenth green in two strokes, as examples.

Counting today's endurance test, Miss Dettweiler's score against Mrs. Meckley is: Miss Dettweiler two victories, Mrs. Meckley three. The former conquered the latter, 2-up, in the District of Columbia 1937 finals, but lost in the 1935 M. A. finals, among their matches.

Evens Match Twice

Although the Maryland champion evened the match twice, she was never up until the twenty-first hole. The defending champion won the second hole for a 1-up lead and increased this to 2-up by taking the fifth. Miss Dettweiler annexed the ninth to be only 1 down at the turn in 41 to 40 strokes.

On the second nine, Miss Dettweiler evened the match for the first time by taking the tenth The defender earned a 1 up advantage again on the twelfth. Here Miss Dettweiler overshot the green. Mrs. Meckley made it 2 up on the fourteenth. On the latter, Mrs. Meckley used an iron club to play safe and short of the stream, and her rival took a wooden club, to land just short of the green.

Both were on the fifteenth in 3, but Miss Dettweiler rammed down a 5-foot putt for a birdie 4, to be only 1 down. The large gallery became tense with excitement as each of

Failure to Play Game Is Reason

Rooney 'On Spot' Officials Get Notes Grid Feud Seen No Comment Here

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 12.—Tom Lipscomb, president of the Cleveland Rams, asked officials of the National Pro Football League today to revoke the franchise of the Pittsburgh Pirates for canceling the Ram-Pirate game scheduled in Pittsburgh next Sunday.

Lipscomb, after two telephone conversations with Art Rooney, Pirates' president, sent telegrams to Joe Carr, league prexy, and officials of all other national loop teams advising them of the situation.

"In both of my talks with Rooney he never said a word about injuries on his team," said Lipscomb. "We know he has three good men out of the line-up with broken bones, but that certainly is not an excuse. We had several of our stars on the sidelines when we played the Chicago Bears last Sunday, but we didn't attempt to call off the game."

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12 (AP).—Arthur Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh pro football Pirates, said today there was nothing unusual about canceling a scheduled league game.

Tom Lipscomb, president of the Cleveland Rams, announced in Cleveland that he had appealed for revocation of the Pirate franchise because Rooney had canceled the Ram-Pirate game scheduled in Pittsburgh next Sunday.

Rooney said of the cancellation: "It's been done in the league often, I have done it myself, and the major league baseball clubs do it."

He reasserted that he had three good ball players, members of the "highest paid team in the league," out with injuries, then recalled:

"It's a darn funny thing. Two years ago I was instrumental in getting the Cleveland team a franchise."

"I don't care what Lipscomb does."

No comment was forthcoming last night from George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, on the report that the Cleveland club had demanded that the Pittsburgh Pirates be ousted from the National Football League.

The Cleveland ownership had asked League President Joe Carr to take action against Pittsburgh following the latter club's cancellation of the game scheduled with Cleveland.

At Mr. Marshall's residence, it was said simply that:

"Mr. Marshall is indisposed."

A new form of color will be injected into the remaining two home games of the Redskins at Griffith Stadium.

The new color note will be found at midfield. General Manager Jack Espey announced last night that the 50-yard markers would be painted with red figures on a field of yellow and that the 50-yard line would be distinguished from all other lines by a bright mixture of lime of a hue as yet undecided.

The new color scheme was suggested to Espey by a Washington fan, Rupert Keefe, of 4724 Third place northwest.

Shugrue Bowls 415 Shah Team Victors At Recreation Alleys

Continuing their winning ways Herzog's rollers, paced by Mike Shugrue's 415 and Astor Clarke's 386, held their two-game lead in the star-studded Recreation League last night at Recreation Alleys by taking the odd skirmish from Allied Roofing Co. Ed Edinger turned in 407 for the losers.

Brad Mandley, shooting 410, featured the Shah & Shah sweep over Sammy's Liquor Store. The triple victory put the jewelers in second place.

Joe Tucci's Plumbers, paced by Joe Harrison's second straight 400 in the loop, a sparkling 418 aided the plumbers to a 2-to-1 win over the American Window Cleaning Co. Harold Hodges, with 383, was tops for the losers.

Chalking up a new season mark with a 662 team game, University Shop rollers, led by Karl Gouchenour's 412, swept their set from the Washington Diesel School. Incidentally it was the ninth straight loss for the Diesel boys.

Paul Jarman's 396 featured the Cubs 2-to-1 verdict over Marvins Credit Co.

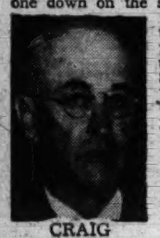
Merrill Lord Upsets Miller Stevinson in Columbia Tourney

Maury Nee Defeated; Webb Wins

Gen. Craig Has 37 Johnson Victor McCarthy Triumphs Lord Wins on 18

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Miller B. Stevinson's hopes for an eighth Columbia Country Club championship were rudely jolted by Merrill Lord, U. S. G. A. committeeman, yesterday in one of the biggest upsets in first round history of the club title play. Lord, three down at one time, and one down on the seventeenth tee, won the next two holes with pars for a one up triumph over Stevinson, National Amateur qualifier this year.



CRAIG

Another favored player, Maury Nee, joined Stevinson in the consolation as Maj. J. R. Francis won by a convincing 4 and 3 margin. Medalist Martin McCarthy was not extended in defeating E. E. Krewson, 5 and 4, while defending champion Harvey Johnson won by a 3 and 2 margin over Albert R. MacKenzie.

Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the United States Army, took the spotlight from the championship flight players with a 37 on the front nine, only 2 over par, as he defeated G. A. Mattingly, 7 and 6. Opposite Gen. Craig's name on the score sheet appeared "He's not a general, he's a pro," in large handwriting.

With Stevinson and Nee eliminated, Johnson and McCarthy are now in the favorite's role, although Johnson meets a strong opponent today in Tommy Webb, who is playing some of the finest golf of the tournament.

A hooked tee shot on the final hole cost Stevinson a chance to go extra holes with Lord, member of the United States Golf Association's museum committee. The ball dropped beside a wire fence and Stevinson was forced to play a sacrifice shot, and lost the hole to a par. Lord meets Commander C. B. Hatch today.

Boston Beats Detroit, 9 to 6, in Late Rally

Gintoff's Kick Wins Palumbo Scores Cignetti Ties Score

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 12.—A second chance was all Fella Gintoff, Boston College's veteran place-kicking and passing ace, needed to boot the Eagles to a hard-earned 9-6 victory over the Detroit Titans today before a shirt-sleeved crowd of 25,000.

During most of the warm holiday afternoon's action, the Boston College players were called upon to battle from behind, although they outplayed their rivals in almost every department.

But their one spotty streak, which came when they wilted late in the first period, was a costly one and the visitors took advantage of Fullback Pete Cignetti's fumble, recovered in midfield by Johnny Maczko, a guard replacement. Ed Palumbo wiped out 38 yards by completing a pass to Johnny Halpin before slipping outside his right tackle for the remaining 12 yards and a touchdown.

That swift blow steadied the Eagles, and, after ruining Palumbo's attempt to convert the extra point, they started their long uphill battle for victory.

Gintoff got his second chance when his mates grounded three long Detroit passes and forced the invaders to punt to Boston's 20. He first completed a 50-yard pass to Vito Ananis, then a 25-yarder to Dick Harrison, a combination that put the Eagles on Detroit's 10-yard line with only seconds to go. After Charley Beer smeared Ananis on an off-tackle play, Gintoff dropped back to the 15-yard mark in the last minute of play and cooly placekicked the field goal the Eagles needed to pass their first major test of the season.

Bike Polo Game Tops Event Here

Officials yesterday predicted an unusually strong field for the fourth annual National Capital Bicycle Sweepstakes, to be held here Sunday, October 22. The meet, under the auspices of the National Capital Parks and Welfare and Recreational Association, and sanctioned by the District A.A.U., is drawing riders from many of the larger East and Midwest cities.

Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Jersey City, New York, Baltimore, Buffalo, Niagara, St. Louis and Chicago are a few of the cities which will be represented.

An innovation to local circles, a bicycle polo game between selected teams, will open the program, which consists of nine racing events. The polo game will begin at 1 p. m., and then will follow these races: Two-mile junior boys; 3-mile open sprint; 1-mile girls' for Washingtonians only; 3-mile handicap for Washingtonians only; 3-miles girls' open sprint; 2-mile senior, for Washingtonians only; 3-mile club pursuit; 2-mile girls' open, and the feature, the 15-mile open sprint.

The last named race is decided on points, which are awarded for the sprints.

Prizes for the races are being donated by the Welfare and Recreational Association and the Mount Vernon Bicycle and Sport Shop.

Redskins 6-5 Underdogs in Lions' Game

40,000 to See Game Farkas Is Back Home Baugh Will Play Turk Edwards Out

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Oct. 13.—Washington's Redskins arrived in Detroit today to discover that for the first time this season they are on the long end of the betting odds in a National League football game.

Detroit betting commissioners were quoting the Lions as 6 to 5 favorites for Sunday's game as an aftermath of last week's battles in which the Redskins were beaten, 10 to 7, by the Giants and the Lions triumphed over the Green Bay Packers.

A crowd of more than 40,000 is anticipated for the game which will mark the Lions' debut in Briggs Stadium, home of the Detroit Tigers, which this year has been given over to professional football.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty of the Redskins lost little time in staging a workout after his team detrained today. Flaherty is no little alarmed by the fact that his Redskins will be without the injured Turk Edwards, bulwark in the line both on offense and defense.

Flaherty anticipates that the Redskins' line, minus Edwards, will be the target of the Lions' running attack which, with Bill Shepherd, Ernie Cadell and Coach Dutch Clark carrying the ball, is hailed as the best in the league.

For Andy Farkas, rookie Redskin star, Sunday's game will be a return to the scene of his triumphs as a collegian. It was at Detroit University that Farkas starred for three years.

Except for Edwards' absence, Flaherty believes that the Redskins on Sunday will be at the peak of their strength on the offense. Sammy Baugh is virtually physically fit after a long siege of injuries and Riley Smith will be in the lineup for the first time this season.

There is little doubt after today's workout that both of Flaherty's new acquisitions—Fullback Tillie Manton and Quarter Frank Filchok will see action in Sunday's games. Showing an ability to grasp the Redskins' singles quickly, Filchok and Manton were used as members of the regular backfield in today's practice.

Max Baer to Fight Winner of Nova-Farr

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP).—Mike Jacobs, boxing promoter, announced here today that Max Baer had agreed to fight the winner of the Louis Nova-Tommy Farr bout, scheduled for Madison Square Garden in New York next December 16.

Sports Postscripts

Gus Dorais who coached Andy Farkas the three years he played for the University of Detroit was not a bit surprised recently when informed by the writer that the Hungarian Hurricane didn't yet know the Redskin signals. "Why, he didn't know the plays here until his senior year," said Gus. "And that's the so-called "mysterious" reason he didn't play in those All-Star games." Dorais, who coached "Dutch" Bergman when the present C. U. football coach was running interference for George Gipp in the Notre Dame backfield, has developed a fine squad at Detroit and should cause all foes no end of trouble. The Titan eleven which trampled Catholic U., 27-0, is a match for any team we've seen this season.

This Randolph-Macon football team which meets Georgetown at Griffith Stadium Saturday abounds in good copy. For instance, there will be five sports captains in its starting line-up. In addition to football captain there will be Basketball Captain Al Palisca; Swimming Captain Al Gajewski, Baseball Captain Lyle McFall and Track Captain John Griek. McFall, fastest and most dangerous runner in the backfield, has run the century in 9.9 with the Yellow Jackets' track team. The Jackets boast they're the only Virginia team which has four complete backfield combinations ready for service and that they've scored on every opponent in their last 12 games. Two bits they don't on Georgetown! And, oh yes, former high school teammates will clash in this game Saturday. Gajewski and Bob Stoy, regular R. M. tackles, graduated from Passaic

Hoya Varsity Is Shaky in Drills With Randolph-Macon Plays

By Jack Munhall.

HAGERTY

Coach Jack Hagerty, fearing trouble from the Jackets, was not one whit less worried at the end of the lengthy drill, for the yearlings went through the varsity line like water through a sieve. Reverses to the short side, often evolving into laterals, caught the varsity off guard time after time and its performance was hardly commendable.

But partially compensating for this defensive weakness was the spark and drive shown by the varsity which has been more or less apathetic following consecutive lopsided victories over Hampden Sydney and Roanoke. One big reason for the new fire and spirit is the individual battles for regular positions being waged by the large New Jersey-New York element on the squad.

Georgetown plays Manhattan in New York a week from Saturday in its first real test and one of the highlight games of its schedule and the N. J.'s and N. Y.'s are anxious to display their talent before the home folks. This motive apparently has been inspiring too, for prominent in the varsity's regular line-up yesterday were no fewer than six New Jerseyites and one New Yorker.

Jules Koshlap and Jim Castiglia, in the backfield, and Augie Lio, Mark Ostinato, Joe Frank, Joe Daniels and Jim Reichey are those players, all but Frank being from New Jersey. He's from New York. Frank, incidentally, returned to practice only yesterday. He has been on the sidelines with a bruised back. Another erstwhile "cripple" who will be back to strengthen Georgetown against the Jackets is Francis (Red) Daly, a Washington boy, who has been out all season with a bad shoulder.

George Washington's undefeated football squad, numbering 28 players in addition to Coaches Bill Reinhart and Botchy Koch and Athletic Director Max Farrington, left yesterday afternoon for Boulder, Colo., where it will meet the University of Colorado Saturday.

The Colonials will hold a practice at Soldiers' Field in Chicago this morning and a second one at the University of Denver tomorrow morning.

Maryland University, bolstered by the return of at least two dependables and perhaps as many as four, hustled through a long workout yesterday confident of scoring its first victory of the season Saturday when it meets Western Maryland.

Francis Beamer, a Washington boy who prepped at Roosevelt, and Charlie Weldinger are the injured players who definitely will be ready for the game. Rip Hewitt and Pershing Mondorff, both backs, are doubtful starters.

In practices so far this week the regular Maryland line-up has shaped up as follows: Ends, Dwyer and Beamer; tackles, Brown and Albarano; guards, Lloyd and Lawrence; center, Smith; quarterback, Weidinger; halfbacks, Skotnicki and Devlin; fullback, Boyda.

Welch Preps For Opener

Bartlett Is Spearhead A. U. Vs. Swarthmore

Coach Gus Welch, the wily Indian coach at American University who experiments with kicking coeds, nine-man lines and other unorthodox things, has just about decided on his starting line-up for the Swarthmore game, which will open the Eagles' season Saturday on the A. U. field.

Hampered by ineligibility and injuries which have claimed several of his star players and which forced him to cancel A. U.'s scheduled opener with Catholic U., October 1, Welch has greatly revised his team. He has built the offense around Emerson Bartlett, a fast, deceptive runner who enjoyed marked success last season. Teamed with Bartlett in the backfield are one senior, Hal Toner, and a pair of sophomores, Hank Benjamin and Melvin (Sonny) Werksman.

Hal Schoop and Jabby Jablonsky, tackles, are the nucleus of the line. Jablonsky is a converted fullback. Others slated to start on the forward wall are George Brown and Hugo Schulze, ends; Kenneth Fox, center, and Don Davido and Charles McKnight, guards.

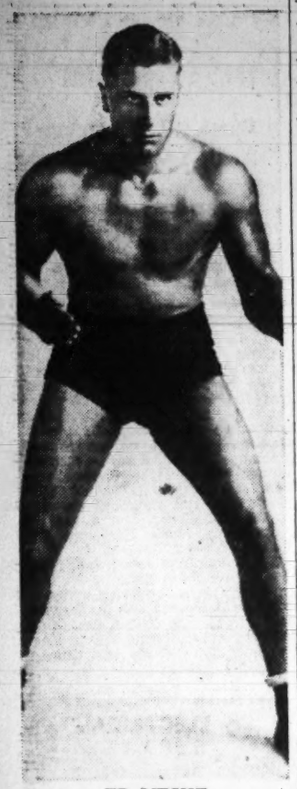
Meske Meets Zaharias in Mat Feature



ED MESKE

Cox Meets Sanooke Three Other Matches Meske Needs Victory

Ed Meske, Akron's gift to professional wrestling, will unlimber his big guns in the direction of Chris Zaharias, the erstwhile Masked Marvel, tonight at Turner's Arena, and it will be a case of "make or break" for the Ohio grappler.

Having been elevated to topline billing, Meske must win and win convincingly to justify the faith Promoter Joseph Turner has in big Ed's mat ability.

Cofeatured with Meske and Zaharias in a double windup bout will be Joe Cox, the dynamic Kansas Krasher, and Chief Sanooke, the 370-pound North Carolina Indian.

Three other matches are on the card. Rudy Dusek returns to meet Al Getz, of New York. John Katan, the Canadian, who was on top against Yvon Robert two weeks ago, engages Tony Calasino, the Italian lad. In another brawl, Sam Menacher, former New York University athlete, will take on George Kondylis.

Meske goes into action tonight with no defeat charged against his local record this season. As a matter of fact, the former Wittenburg College football star has been going at such a dizzy pace, and gaining in popularity to such an extent that Promoter Turner had no other alternative than to promote him to a headline role. Meske last week slammed Ed Newman to gain a popular fall.

Big Ed no longer is a nice fellow on the mat. As long as his opponent goes clean, Ed does. But when his adversary cuts loose and gets rough—so does the Ohioan.

In Zaharias he meets a feared performer. A regular jumping jack in the ring, Chris has been "wowing" spectators with his daredevil grappling. He is the brother of George Zaharias, who used to pack 'em in at the Auditorium and Stadium.

If Meske wins, he is due to meet either Everett Marshall, the N. B. A. champion, or Crusher Casey, the Bowser standard bearer.

Fans also will welcome the return of a familiar figure—Joe Cox. The Kansas wrestler hasn't appeared in some eight months at the Arena. Although a bad man of the mat, Cox has never lost his popularity. He is up against it tonight, however, for Sanooke is 370 pounds, 6 feet 6.

First bout is at 8:30.

Our Guest Selector

Our Guest Selector for today is Gaby, short on name but long on turf experience. He is the racing editor of the Baltimore News-Post and is the dean of turf writers in his home town. A keen student of form and a close observer of races, Gaby has been in the first flight of handicappers for years. Gaby, with the other members of the Maryland Turf Writers' Association, is busy these days selling tickets for the Turf Writers' supper and frolic to be staged at the Lord Baltimore Hotel on November 10. Needless to say, he spends many hours scanning the back charts and speed books in selecting his horses. Expert that he is, he will have to be on his luck to outpick Art Brown, of Station WOL, who supplied this column four winners yesterday. Here's Gaby's picks:

1—Prowl, Golden Vein, Idyllic.

6—The Queen, San Antioca, Jolly Jack.

7—Quicker, Kai-Minn, Chainwick.

Best bet—Quicker.

Red Wings Captain Suffers Leg Injury

Detroit, Oct. 12 (AP).—Capt. Douglas Young, of the Detroit Red Wings, suffered a possible fracture of the left leg in the local National Hockey League club's first practice skirmish today.

Young was carrying the puck for the first time and was attempting to go around "Bucko" McDonald, veteran defenseman, and Eddie Bush, a rookie, when the accident happened. Young crashed into Bush and fell.

Good Chance Wins Governor Ogle Steeplechase at Laurel

Rioter Runs Last; Victor Pays $12.90

Paper Maker Second John One Also Wins Takes Handicap Favorite Weakens

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 12.—A Columbus Day crowd of 10,000 discovered too late that it made the wrong favorite in the Gov. Ogle Steeplechase Handicap, a $3,500 added affair which topped today's card. Betting customers flocked to Thomas Hitchcock's Rioter. With only three entries, it appeared that they couldn't go wrong. However, Rioter pulled up last in the vest-pocket field.

The winner was the Rokeby Stable's Good Chance, the longest shot in the group. He supplied a $12.90 pay-off to his backers, while those who played Rioter booed Rigan McKinney, whose riding was not the cause of Rioter's poor performance.

The Hitchcock gelding, always a factor with the best of New York jumpers this year, was not himself. He stumbled over several fences, almost fell and forced McKinney to lose a stirrup at one.

Paper Maker, running in the interests of F. Ambrose Clark, set practically all the pace. He saved much ground while running in front, but Jockey E. Roberts on Good Chance went to a drive and disposed of Paper Maker, going on to win easily.

This was the first time the stake had been run at 2-mile route. In fact, the race was discarded in 1931. Previously, it had been at distances of 2½ and 3 miles. Good Chance, the fourth steeplechase winner for Trainer J. T. Skinner and Jockey Roberts at the meeting was clocked in 3:52 3-5.

The day's secondary feature, the Columbus Day Handicap, proved a thriller of the first grade. John One, representing the Milky Way Stable, took a last leap that gave him a victory over W. L. Brann's Journey On. Lady Maryland was third in the field of seven. Black Wave, made the favorite, had much trouble and weakened nearing the end. A $17.10 shot, John One was never far out of it, while Journey On was setting the pace.

A $12.70 daily double payoff resulted from victories of favorites in the key races. Banner Man, another Milky Way stable horse, took the first event, paying $4.60, while Sea Gull, at $6.60, won the third race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANNER MAN, $4.60, $3.00, $2.60; KEY MAN, $8.70, $4.70; SIR KHAYYAM, $6.90.

BANNER MAN, forwardly placed from start, rallied to strong handling in stretch and held KEY MAN safe at end. KEY MAN lacked early speed, improved position with rush leaving backstretch and closed full of run. SIR KHAYYAM, away slowly, saved ground while moving up and closed willingly. BACK PAGE, forced to race wide, moved up menacingly in early stretch but weakened. SEABREAD, first away, set good pace to stretch and tired. PART ONE went evenly. IMMUNITY and FOREVER GREEN had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:07. Off 2:10½. Winner, A. C. Compton's ch. m. HAPPY KNOT, away on top, drew out while setting pace and was kept to drive to stave off closing bid of JOANNY. The latter improved her position gradually on outside and came with good energy in closing test. SOME COUNT, slow to begin, closed fastest of all. DOG FLOWER was listlessly handled in early running and weakened when placed to drive. BEAUFAST was not a factor. PATSEY BEGONE could not keep up.

Billy Shea's Sub-par 70 Wins Medal Honors At Congressional

Shea Plays Back Nine in 33
Match Play Starts Saturday

Billy Shea, last of the Congressional members to qualify in the club championship, needed a 76 or better to win the medal honors and the Georgetown junior, accomplished that feat with ease, playing the course in two under par 70.

Out in 37, regulation figures, Shea was 33 on the back nine including a bogey 5 on the comparatively easy finishing hole. He had five 3s, two of them pars, and three birdies on the return trip.

Thus the 77s of Billy Dettweiler, Jack McCarron and Claude Rippy were forced into the runner-up roles.

Play in the ten flights starts Saturday, with the championship flight playing in twosomes and the other nine in foursomes. Shea meets Dave Morris; defending champion Dr. Howard L. Smith faces Billy Dettweiler, and Rippy and Louis Fuchs tangle in leading first-round encounters.

The drawing of the Calcutta Pool tickets on the championship will take place tonight at the club.

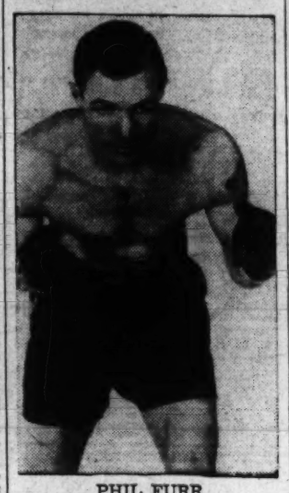
Furr Planning To Live Here; Fights Monday



PHIL FURR

To Meet Pimpinella Is Training Hard Criticizes Mamakos

Phil Furr, the erstwhile soldier and plasterer, who developed a wanderlust spirit a few years ago and decided to roam the country as a barnstorming fighter, yesterday announced that he will return to Washington and stay here for good.

Furr, who is training energetically and faithfully these days at the Huron gym for his important ten-round headline match with Vincent Pimpinella, sensational Brooklyn welterweight, next Monday night at Turner's Arena, said that there is no place like home—and no better fight town in the country than the Nation's Capital.

Referring to Steve Mamakos, the Gilded Greek, who Phil claims "ran out" on the fight with him scheduled for this Monday, Furr declared:

"That preliminary boy told me to go out an get a reputation for myself before he would agree to meet me. I would like to let him know that I have boxed all the best welterweights in the world in the best clubs in the country—from Hollywood to New York's Madison Square Garden. My reputation speaks for itself.

"If Steve feels that it is necessary to go about the country fighting to win a name for yourself—he's all wet. All that got me was a cauliflower ear. He'd better stay at home and get developed.

"Joey Archibald, who fights for the featherweight title next Monday in New York, certainly owes Washington a lot. He made his reputation here—so did Petey Sarron, and others too numerous to mention.

"Hurrah for Washington. I'm glad to be back, and I'm here to stay.

Furr said that he was buying a home for his wife in Washington, but that he intended to keep fighting for the next five years.

Wheat Closes Higher at Winnipeg

Liverpool Rise Helps
Buenos Aires Closed
Export Sales Low

By the Associated Press.

Winnipeg, Oct., 12.—Winnipeg wheat futures made slow headway late today with operations virtually at a standstill due to lack of outside influences. Prices rallied a cent at the start and then eased to close ⅛@⅜ higher, October 60⅛, November 60⅜, December 59¾, May 63¼.

Canadian wheat export sales were estimated at less than 100,000 bushels. After the initial buying flurry by local commission houses and Seaboard firms, trading ceased for long periods. Offerings were light and contributed to the strong undertone of the market.

With United States markets on holiday all intermarket operations were at a standstill. Buenos Aires also was closed.

Reports of dry weather which may have a serious effect on the Australian wheat crop caused improved buying at Liverpool and resulted in final quotations 1¾@1⅞d higher. The unexpected advance in Liverpool prices inspired Winnipeg's initial gains.

Stocks Lower On London Exchange

Dollar Improves
Trading Is Quiet

London, Oct. 12.—Trading was quiet today on the stock exchange. The general trend of prices was narrowly lower. The political outlook was considered discouraging by traders and another factor keeping the market inactive was the aversion to making new commitments pending tomorrow's settlement.

Trading in transatlantic issues was affected by the Columbus Day holiday in Wall street, but this group improved slightly late in the day.

Aircraft, iron and steel and other shares connected with rearmament were firm through the session, together with some gold mine and oil stocks. Speculative issues generally, however, were easier. The market closed with a tone of indecision.

The continued flow of continental funds to the United States for investment created a strong demand for the dollar in the foreign exchange market. It gained 1¼ cents against the pound sterling, despite frequent intervention by the control, and closed at 4.74¾. The franc was also slightly firmer against sterling.

Montreal

Montreal, Oct. 12.—Changes on the stock exchange in today's trading were narrow. Noranda continued firm, setting a new high at 79½, up ½. International Nickel eased ¼. Utilities were firm with Gatineau and Power Corporation up ½ each, though Shawinigan gave up ½. Canada Steamship Lines preferred sold down ¾ but Dryden Paper showed a gain of ⅛. Canadian Pacific and International Pete made small gains.

Toronto

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Trading was slow in industrial shares on the stock exchange today but action was brisk in mining shares and base metal prices advanced.

Noranda posted a new high for the year at 79½ and Consolidated Smelters sold a point higher at 61½. Hudson Bay, Coast Copper, Waite Amulet, Sherritt, Pend Oreille, Chromium and Aldermac all registered moderate gains. International Nickel held unchanged. Silvers were quiet at steady prices.

Minor gains predominated in the utility and food groups while steels and papers leaned to the down side. Senior oils showed little change aside from a ⅛ advance for International Petroleum.

Those last holes took heart. But they both had it. Mrs. Meckley had to sink an 8-foot putt on the tricky seventeenth, which they both drove, to halve it. Miss Dettweiler put in a 3-foot putt. It could have been the end for either one on the eighteenth. Miss Dettweiler's drive was in some bushes under a tree, but she was on in 3 and 2-putted. Mrs. Meckley hooked her second, an iron. The recovery, which didn't recover, landed on the bank of an intervening trap. She was on in four and holed a 3-footer, to halve the hole. Lesser nerves would have cracked. But both were seasoned campaigners.

Championship Flight
Helen Dettweiler (Congressional) defeated Mrs. Betty Meckley (Indian Spring), 1 up (21 holes).
Mrs. W. R. Stokes (Indian Spring) defeated Mrs. Jerome Sloman (Suburban), 4 and 3.

In the meantime, George McDaniel, 160 pounds, from Virginia, and Cliff Lenz, 200-pounder from Pennsylvania, are being groomed as Wood's relief. Both have been carrying the ball well, McDaniel being particularly effective this afternoon.

Head Coach Hardwick has thoroughly disabused the minds of his charges of the early week idea that Yale was going to be easy. The players have now settled down to the most ardent sort of preparation for this first major game.

THE ANGORA SWEATER

Bob Burns Says—

The best way to appreciate our country is to compare it with some of the others. Those military countries take every available young man and put him in the army and teach him to fight. They almost have'ta have a war because the men are not trained to do anything else. This country has an army too but it's an army of workers.

I know one fella over here who applied for a job as an artist model. The artist said, "This is a gruelin' job. You have'ta stand in one position for hours. Do you think you con do it?" The man says, "That'll be a cinch for me—I've been workin' on a Government job for 16 months!"

$160,000 Will Go To Purify Potomac

Efforts to clean up the Potomac River took another step forward yesterday when President Roosevelt approved three PWA projects for sewage treatment works at Navy stations here to cost $160,000.

Work at the Naval Air Station, to cost $30,000, will provide treatment works sufficient to prevent pollution of the Potomac from raw sewage. That at Bellevue will cost $5,000. The $125,000 balance will be spent at Quantico.
